Rum Prices Reduced; Big Middleman's Profit Bared

Distillers Reverse Selves and Reveal Bonded Whisky Figures.

Blended Liquors Take Sharp Drop

Lists Show Marylanders' "Cut Rates" Triple Wholesale Costs.

By Frank Getty.

A decided drop in distillers' prices for blended whisky, together with quotations, for the first time, on whisky bottled in bond, was revealed yesterday by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

Definite price lists for the entire distilled spirits industry, furnished by Dr. J. M. Doran, code authority supervisor, indicate a general reduction of 5 to 15 per cent from the tentative prices made public December 17.

The new quotations, covering whisky prices to wholesalers for every branch of the industry, show the distillers have abandoned their original intention not to submit price lists on straight old whiskies, which they desired to conserve for blending purposes.

Bonded $60 a Case.

Bottled-in-bond whisky prices to wholesalers, including Federal and State taxes, average about $60 a case—indicating that the price to the consumer will put quite a strain on the pocketbook of the average man who desires to buy straight, 17-year-old liquor.

Blended-whisky prices, on the other hand, have dropped considerably in the last six weeks.

In most instances, the new distillers' price lists illustrate even more strikingly than those first submitted to the FACA the tremendous profits that are being exacted by middle men—wholesalers and retailers.

While disclosure of these profits by The Post, and a general leveling-off process with the waning of the first uproarious demand for legal liquor, served to bring down retail prices appreciably, there remains a wide margin between the distillers' new tax-paid prices and what the consumer has to pay.

Buyer Knows Now.

The formal posting of definite whisky prices under the code is expected to eliminate much of the recent uncertainty as to fair retail prices. The buying public now can see just what the manufacturer charges, after paying Federal and State taxes, and can figure for himself whether he is being overcharged.

Among the distilleries furnishing much of the whisky consumed in the District of Columbia is the Penn-Maryland Co., Inc. Below is a comparison of its tentative wholesale prices, furnished the FACA six

10,000 Lose Lives in Flood

Many Frozen as Ice Jams Wreck Chinese Homes; River Still Rises.

Shanghai, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Ten thousand persons were reported today to have drowned or frozen to death in floods of the Yellow River, roaring over its banks in Honan and Hopei Provinces, in North Central China.

Thousands were missing in 70 counties affected worst by the floods, due to rapidly melting ice and snows, at the headwaters of the great stream.

The water was reported rising swiftly tonight. Ice floes wrecked hundreds of homes. Thousands were exposed to the cold and wet in open boats.

The ice made rescue work dangerous or impossible in most cases. Boats laden with supplies were unable to reach many of the destitute.

The Yellow River was reported to have risen more than 5 feet in the last 36 hours, endangering hundreds of miles of dykes.

Boat Capsizes With 300 Japanese; Five Perish

Nagasaki, Japan, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—The municipal ferryboat Asahi Maru, carrying more than 300 persons, capsized today in coming alongside the pier and at least five persons drowned.

Most of the passengers were dock workers, many of whom swam ashore and went home without reporting, making an accurate tally of the missing impossible. Thirty were taken to a hospital for treatment for exposure.

New Island Appears.

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—A Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatch today from Sapporo said a government fisheries guardship reported a new island had appeared in the northern Kurile Islands as the result of a subterranean eruption.

Flier on Mercy Mission Dives Plane Into Sea

Kitty Hawk, N. C., Jan. 28 (A.P.).—George H. Tomkin, Norfolk, Va., pilot, and Llewellyn Harris, an injured passenger, were rescued from the ship near here today after their plane had nosedived into the ocean.

Harris, a native of Kitty Hawk, had suffered a broken arm a few minutes before when the propeller of Tomkin's plane struck him as he enedavored to remove a piece of wreckage from the plane's path in a projected take-off.

The flyer immediately placed the injured man in the plane to rush him to a Norfolk hospital, but the plane nosedived into the ocean.

A short time before the lookout at Paul Gamiel's Hill Station thought the flier in distress and notified Capt. Graham Snow, who started with a crew for the scene. They arrived just as the plane struck the surf.

Cummings' Son Hurt in Fatal Motor Crash

Attorney General's Kin Critically Injured; Woman Killed.

Norwalk, Conn., Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Dickinson Cummings, son of United States Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, remained in a serious condition at the Norwalk Hospital tonight after an automobile accident in which a woman was killed.

Attendants said Cummings, only child of the Attorney General, was "just the same" as he was when brought to the hospital in a critical condition, suffering from a possible fracture of the skull.

Driver Arrested.

Mrs. Etta Plank Taylor, of Stamford, a passenger in the car with Cummings, was killed as the automobile went off the Boston Post road in Darien last night and struck a tree.

The driver Albert Mishley, of Stamford, escaped injury, as did a fourth person in the car, Mrs. Atatha Raphael, of Stamford. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Raphael are relatives of Mishley.

Mishley was released under $2,500 bond on a technical charge of manslaughter and the Bridgeport coroner set Wednesday for an inquest.

Operation Planned.

A brain specialist, Dr. Herbert M. Bowlby, of Stamford and New York, was called in on the Cummings case and Dr. W. W. Tracey, surgeon of the Norwalk Hospital, was quoted as saying they planned a spine operation.

His wife and their 6-year-old son, Schuyler, came to the bedside from their home in Stamford.

From Washington, the Attorney General wired to the hospital to spare no expense or effort in saving his son's life. He was not expected, however, to leave the Capital.

Farm Posse Acts After Five Fires

Pyromaniac Suspect Seized in North Carolina.

Danville, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Aroused by the fifth successive mysterious barn fire in 24 hours, farmers of nearby Caswell County, N. C., banded together to seek the culprit.

One suspect was arrested after the latest fire—in the barn of Mrs. Nettie Paschal. Sheriff Yancey Gatewood said the man seemed mentally deficient. A posse caught the man not far from one of the blazes.

Half burned matches and footprints were found near ruins of two of the barns today. Damage estimated at $3,300, included the loss of three cows, six mules and a quantity of forage.

Detroit Ship Owner Dies at Miami Beach

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Commodore A. A. Schantz, 73, of Detroit, died today in his winter residence here after an illness of several months.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt is expected to sign the gold bill late tomorrow and then proclaim a 4 per cent reduction in the gold content of the dollar, to provide, theoretically, a "60-cent dollar."

How to drive the dollar down to that level in foreign exchange will be the problem of the secret triumvirate of foreign exchange experts, who, Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he means to call in to operate the $2,000,000,000 "stabilization" fund created out of the Treasury's profits on the revalued gold.

Apprehensions of currency warfare do not exist within the Administration, although some economic schools foresee French and possibly British barriers against American gold purchases and the shifting of capital back to this country. The Foreign Policy Association issued a report yesterday by Maxwell S. Stewart, predicting foreign defensive measures "against the challenge of the cheapened dollar."

Complications in Sight.

Federal Reserve System remonstrances against having its note issues backed by an uncertain, variable quantity of gold may serve to complicate the next steps which the Administration proposes to take, but hardly to prevent them. However, the chances for complete abandonment of Prof. George F. Warren's commodity dollar of varying gold content seem to be increasing.

Prof. Warren and Prof. Fisher, alone among the davisers to whom Mr. Roosevelt listens, still cling to the commodity dollar theory. All the others, orthodox and unorthodox alike, call it unworkable. Moreover, public opinion at home and abroad has insisted upon interpreting the gold bill as a marked advance toward stabilization in the sense of a fixed gold content of the dollar.

It is entirely possible that Mr. Roosevelt, after further weighing all the factors, will at least eliminate the commodity dollar and, to a large extent, eliminate the reserve system objections to having its currency backed by an indfinite quantity of gold.

Economists See Fund Loss.

Most economists think the Treasury can exhause its $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund very rapidly trying to beat the dollar down to the 60-cent point or under. Measured by the barometer of foreign exchange, the dollar stood around 63 cents at the en dof last week. The internal dollar, measured by the barometer of price indices, is now even down to 65 cents.

Proclaiming a 60-cent dollar does not make it one. That is one answer to the frequent question of the layman, "What does this revaluation mean to my dollars?" As economists pointed out to the Congressional committees, apropos of the gold bill, revaluation ordinarily is merely a legal recognition of an accomplished fact.

As we have not yet achieved the 60-cent dollar, the stabilization fund presumably is to be used trying to hammer it down to that level. When and if that is achieved, the layman will notice the difference in the buying power of his dollar. At the moment his dollar has a buying power somewhat above the 60-cent mark.

Mrs. Chapin's Condition "Not So Satisfactory"

Thomasville, Ga., Jan. 28 (A.P.).—The surgeon attending Mrs. Charles M. Chapin, jr., New York society woman seriously wounded in a hunting accident several days ago, said her condition today was "not so satisfactory."

Mrs. Chapin was wounded in the abdomen by the accidental discharge of her shotgun during a dove hunting expedition with her husband and two guests. She lost considerable blood as she was taken from the Chapin winter estate near here to the hospital, five miles.

Alas! There Are More Earths, More Suns; We're Not Alone

(Associated Press.)

"Solar systems" like our own, with planets revolving around central suns, are pictured as widespread throughout the universe in a new astronomical theory made public yesterday by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

This is contrary to ideas of many astronomers who have believed there is little likelihood of many other planetary systems existing.

The new theory holds that planets are formed as part of the routine of evolution of almost all stars and therefore are common occurrences. It is advanced by Prof. Dinsmore Alter, of the University of Kansas, in a report to the association.

He discounts the idea held by many astronomers that our planets were formed from masses of gas pulled from the sun by tidal attraction when a passing star "sidewiped" the sun ages ago.

Astronomers who accepted this theory have believed it to be evidence that systems of planets must be rare in the universe because chances of such a collision are extremely remote. Mathematical calculations showed the stars are so far apart that a clash between two of them could not take place more than once in a vast eon of time.

Prof. Alter holds that the planets in our solar system, including the earth, were formed from atoms accumulating in the outer atmosphere of the sun. A similar process, he believes, took place on the stars, which are really "suns." Therefore, most of them

Socialist Leader Held In Plot to Rob Bank

Arizona Man Who Got 7,000 Votes for Congress Against Mrs. Greenway Caught After Chase in Night; Police Say He Confesses.

Winslow, Ariz., Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Dillworth Sumpter, Socialist candidate for Representative in Congress from Arizona, opposing Isabella Greenway, Democrat, in the State's October special election, confessed today, Police Chief R. L. Neil said, to attempted bank robbery.

The police chief said Sumpter confessed attempting to rob the First National Bank of Winslow during the night.

The unsuccessful Congress candidate was arrested by Patrolman James Hickey after a chase of three blocks. Hickey fired into the air several times, he, said, before Sumpter halted.

The officer, Neil said, found Sumpter starting a tunnel under the bank in a narrow space between it and another building.

Sumpter, the police chief said, was equipped with a pick, shovel, drills, explosives and a supply of water. Neil said Sumpter told him he had hoped to be able to tunnel through the floor of the bank before Monday.

He was quoted by Neil as explaining he was out of a job and hungry and that "the world owed him a living." Sumpter is an electrician.

Sumpter, in the October 3 special election, polled more votes than any other Socialist in the history of Arizona and, for the first time, carried his party ahead of one of the major political parties.

His vote was nearly 7,000, twice that received by H. B. Wilkinson, Republican. Mrs. Greenway, however, defeated him decisively.

He campaigned through the State, first on horseback, putting up at cattle ranches, and then in a motor car. The car was covered with political placards.

Astonishment and keen regret were the reactions of Representative Isabella Greenway (Democrat), Arizona, when a Post reporter last night informed her of the arrest on charges of attempted bank robbery in Winslow, Ariz., of Dillworth Sumpter, her foremost opponent in last October's election.

"I just can't believe it's true," exclaimed Mrs. Greenway at first.

Later, after the complete Associated Press dispatch had been read to her, she said:

"I want you to know that it is profoundly tragic. I don't know what else to say. I don't know what to say when a man is in trouble and is hungry and penniless."

Mrs. Greenway said Sumpter gave her a hard campaign prior to her election last fall.

Austria Plans Finish Fight Against Nazis

Fascist Home Guard Is Told to Take Law Into Own Hands.

Vienna, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—An appeal to the armed Fascist Heimwehr (Home Guard) to take the law into its own hands and fight to the finish with Nazis was delivered today by Prince Ernst Starhemburg, Heimwehr leader.

"There is only one law in the Heimwehr—I command and you obey," said Starhemburg.

"My command is that effective today the Heimwehr must go actively into the offensive. Every leader down to the last man must henceforth immediately avenge every Nazi attack. If legal authorities fail to mete out justice, take the law into your own hands."

With the approach of the anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to power in Germany the government has announced plans for a determined fight against Nazis.

Vice Chancellor Emil Fey, who is Starhemburg's subordinate in the Heimwehr, approved the leader's words.

Pointing out it was not impossible that Socialists "might unite with Nazi in antigovernment offenses, Fey said:

"This is a final fight. It is now or never. Whoever raises a hand against the Heimwehr must be struck down."

Before urging a ruthless drive against their opponents, Starhemburg denounced Count Johann Alberti and other Heimwehr men who have gone Nazi, and said all efforts to reach a friendly agreement with the Hitlerites had failed.

Vienna, Austria, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—A demand that Chancellor Adolf Hitler make a written declaration recognizing Austria's sovereign independence was made tonight by Prince Starhemberg.

"In the first place, we will have no negotiations with small fry," he declared, "but will deal only with Hitler himself or an important representative with written power.

Cold, Hunger Kill 41 on Korean Isle

Hundreds More Reported Verging on Starvation.

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—A Rengo (Japanese) press agency dispatch today from Taiku, Korea, said at least 41 persons were dead in a blizzard which has swept the shores of the Sea of Japan for the past four days.

Rescue parties from the mainland bringing food to the aid of residents of Matsu Island, off the east coast of Korea, found 41 corpses of victims of freezing and starvation.

Hundreds more are on the verge of starvation, it was reported.

Vanderlip to Become Editor of Magazine

New York, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Frank A. Vanderlip, banker and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, is going to become a magazine editor.

The editors of the year-old publication, Economic Forum, announced today that Vanderlip will be "actively interested" in its editorial management. Vanderlip said his decision to enter the editorial field had been influenced by his "profound belief" in the public need for sounder economic understanding.

Bishop Jails Nazi Church Rebel Chief

Suspended Pastor First Victim of Mueller Dictatorship.

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, fighting head of the Pastors Emergency Confederation and an Iron Cross war hero, was arrested today by Prussian Secret Police, the first victim of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller's church dictatorship.

The police entered his home while he was sitting in his study recalling submarine adventures with another former U-boat commander, who now heads a division of Hitler's storm troopers. Niemoeller just had time to gather up his toothbrush and Bible and kiss his wife goodby before he was whisked off to jail.

The Nazi leader who had been in the study with him, together with other Nazi functionaries made representations in his behalf, which succeeded in obtaining his release several hours later on condition that he report daily to the Secret Police.

His arrest followed his suspension from the church yesterday by Bishop Emil Karow, of Berlin, and confiscation of all his correspondence.

According to latest advices, more than 100 oppositional pastors throughout Prussia already have been suspended, with more soon to follow in the wake of Bishop Mueller's emergency decree yesterday, by which he set himself up as the spiritual dictator of 19,000,000 Prussian Protestants.

One Hurt, Autos Buried by Wall

High Wind Topples Brick Frame at Parking Lot; Debris Searched.

At least one man was injured and a half a score of automobiles entombed as high wind crumpled a huge section of brick wall adjacent to a large auto parking lot at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest last night.

William P. Anderson, 23, of 1313 Twenty-fifth street northwest, was rushed to Emergency Hospital by rescuers. He was unconscious and no diagnosis had been made some time later.

Fire apparatus rushed to the scene. Firemen began digging in the piles of debris, covering the buried machines. Curious crowds were held back by police details.

Anderson was believed to hav been about to enter one of the buried machines when the wall crumpled. The fallen section was part of an old building torn down to make room for the parking lot.

A damage estimate was not available immediately.

Traylor Believed On Way to Health

Doctors Hope to Dispense With Oxygen Tomorrow.

Chicago, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Physicians attending Melvin A. Traylor, bank president, seriously ill of pneumonia for a week, reported today that they "believed they had the case licked."

Mr. Traylor is "holding his own nicely," said Dr. William R. Cubbins and Dr. N. Clarke Gilbert. The banker slept well last night and today his temperature was about normal. The physicians said they hoped to remove him from the oxygen tent by Tuesday.

Herriot May Head State To Quell Paris Rioters; National Unrest Grows

Nitrate Ship Spurt Starts U. S. Inquiry

12 Vessels Chartered to Load in Chile for Unnamed Ports.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—An even dozen ships, some of them idle for many months have been suddenly rushed into service and ordered to Chile to load nitrates for ports unnamed in their charters, but presumed to be Russia and Japan.

The sudden chartering of the vessels was the subject of discussion by members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet in Washington yesterday and by a conference of shipping men an dconsular agents in New York Thursday.

Government agents here today were making inquiries to ascertain from what source the chartering of these vessels originated and their final port of destination. American agents thought it strange none of the ships were ordered to America to load nitrate, which is produced in large quantities at Hopewell, Va. Thousands of tons have been loaded at the Virginia port for Japan during the past two years.

Shipping Circles Interested.

There is only one explanation given to the sudden chartering of so many vessels to load nitrates and that is that both Japan and Russia are planning intensive manufacture of war munitions.

Shipping circles here were much excited over the wholesale dispatching of vessels to Chile.

Detail of the chartering of the ships, their destination and other things connected with their movements have not been made public. A cablegram from Norway received in Washington yesterday stated that there was no definite information about ports of discharge. "Details unknown" read this cablegram which was delivered to diplomatic heads of several nations in the National Capital.

The names of the ships, however, were made known in the message and from information received from other sources.

The Ships Affected.

The ships are the British Levenbridge, a vessel of 2,649 tons and capable of loading 7,500 tons cargo, now at Bagnoli; British steamer Fife, a 2,626 tons and a 6,500 tons vessel, now in the English Channel.

Norwegian Flint, 3,345 tons, and a 11,000-ton cargo vessel laid up in Bergen; Swedish steamer Faxen, 2,537 tons, or 7,000-tons cargo, last reported at Danzig.

British steamer Hartside, 2,317 tons, a 6,500-ton cargo craft at Hamburg; British steamer Induna, 3,221 tons, a 8,000-ton cargo carrier, now at Liverpool.

Norwegian Knut Hamsum, 3,234, a 10,000-ton cargo carrier now at Balboa and ordered to Tocopilla.

British steamer Martahara, 3,105 tons, a 11,000-ton cargo carrier, now at Liverpool; Norwegian Primero, 2,668 tons, or 8,000-ton carrier, en route Montevideo; Norwegian Ramsdalshn, 4,121 tons, 12,00-ton carrier, at Bergen, and the Norwegian Tilthorn, 4,119 tons, or 12,000-ton carrier also at Bergen.

"We Need No Kaiser!" Nazi Workers Told

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Employers and employes of a huge industrial plant attending a party tonight heard a vigorous antimonarchist speech in which the chairman of the factory union said "we need no kaiser so long as we have Chancellor Hitler."

The party was one of the first held along Nazi-Socialist lines, which orders disappearance of the classes. Members of the board of directors mingled with the lowest-paid workers.

Seeks Premier

Indiana Police Speed Dillinger Gang Removal

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 28 (A.P.).—Hopes of the "Dangerous Dillingers," of Indiana to "beat the rap" in Arizona faded rapidly today as Midwest peace officers swarmed into the Pima County jail, regarded with cold eyes the men they had come to get, and expedited dispatch of extradition papers to the Governor in Phoenix.

Police Chief Nicholas Makar, of East Chicago, Ind., and Sheriff Carroll Holley, of Lake County, took one look at John Dillinger, gangster chieftain, through the jail bars, and said simultaneously:

"He's the man who killed Pat O'Malley."

Dillinger growled and paced his cell. All of the gang seized here, Dillinger, Harry Pierpont, Russell Clark, Charles Makley and the women, mary Kinder, alias Mrs. Pierpont; Opal Long, alias Mrs. Dillinger, were nervous as the Midwest officers peered at them.

Pierpont raged and cursed when he saw Matt Leach, chief of Indiana State Police.

"I have just one regret," Pierpont said, "and that is that I didn't get back to Indiana to get you. You put my mother in jail in Terre Haute without reason and without my knowledge. I wish I could have gotten you."

Leach said Pierpont's mother was taken into custody by Terre Haute police who sought information regarding her son's whereabouts. He said he had not put her in jail.

The State police head said extradition papers had gone direct to the governor's office in Phoenix.

R. G. Estell, Lake County, Ind., prosecutor, accompanied Makar and Holley, as did Robert Wilgus, an eyewitness of the robbery of the East Chicago First National Bank January 15, 1934, when Patrolman O'Malley was slain.

Holley described the killing of O'Malley, for which Lake County, he said, is determined to have Dillinger regardless of what becomes of the others. John Hamilton, another member of the gang, also wanted in Lake County, is sought.

Marriages Restricted.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—A government decree prohibiting consular employes in the Brazilian foreign service from marrying without permission, and forbidding them to marry foreigners, was issued today by the foreign office.

Pay-Debt Advocate Now Likely Choice

Paris, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—France seemed ready to turn to veteran Premier Edouard Herriot today to lift the nation from the riot-ridden crisis which toppled the Chautemps government.

President Albert Lebrun asked former President Gaston Doumergue to form a cabinet in his first move to reorganize the government, but Doumergue refused.

The president called him at his place of retirement in Tournefeuille, but Doumergue answered that his 71 years made it impossible to accept so heavy a task.

The hurried resignation of the Chautemps cabinet Saturday, driven from power by popular indignation over the Stavisky bank scandal, faced Lebrun with the task of solving a "moral crisis" instead of a mere political problem.

Herriot Choice Predicted.

Herriot was generally predicted to be chosen for premier, but leaders opposing a Herriot regime proclaimed through former Premier Tardieu the need for a national union ministry for "a clean-up vote of the budget and dissilution of Parliament if necessary."

The streets of Paris were comparatively quiet today after a night of intense rioting which capped eight days of open disorder. At Rouen, however, government employes, encouraged by the success of Paris mobs, staged demonstrations against pay cuts and scandals, shouting "down with thieves."

The Royalist newspaper Action Francaise, which presented in glaring headlines "Paris in Revolt Drives Out Chautemps," threatened new demonstrations in Paris.

Debt Issue Not Pressing.

Friends of Herriot declare that his health is better and that his stand for payment of French war debts, which caused his government to fall, would not prevent his acceptance of the premiership at this time, since the next debt payment is due on June 15, a long way off as French cabinets go.

Herriot was represented as feel-

Insull Termed Ill and Afraid

Deportation or Indefinite Stay Rests on Visit of Greek Doctors.

Athens, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—A frightened and sick man, in bed gasping for breath, was how persons having entree to his apartment today pictured Samuel Insull, once powerful utilities executive, as he waited a decision on whether his stay here would be extended.

A medical commission appointed by the minister of interior will examine Insull tomorrow. If they agree with findings of Insull's private physicians that he is too ill to travel, his permit to remain in Greece will be indefinitely prolonged, M. Montzourimis, interior minister, said.

If the commission does not agree with the other physicians, Insull will be deported within three days, it was understood.

Members of the Insull entourage said his condition was worse today and he was unable to read a newspaper.

Freezing Weather Rushes on Capital

Special Warning Is Issued as Mercury Tumbles

Rapidly falling temperature with high northwest winds last night caused Weather Bureau experts to issue a special cold wave warning. Motorists were warned to take immediate steps against freezing weather expected by midnight.

Temperature was expected to reach 15 degrees above zero by 8 a. m. today. This intensity was predicted to hold through today and for tonight a sharper drop was forecast.

The following storm warning was issued:

"Northeast storm warning ordered 4 p. m., Virginia Capes to Eastport, Me. A disturbance of marked intensity central over eastern Ontario moving rapidly eastward."

King Kelly Sends Peace Pipes, Hopes Curse Goes Up in Smoke

New York, Jan. 28 (A.P.).—John J. (I Don't Wanna Be King) Kelly tonight had survived a full week of the "curse of the Swahilis" and was breathing somewhat easier.

Kelly, whose passion for selling hot dogs in Central Park led him to snub an offer to become king of the Swahilis, a tribe of East Africans, is now striving to make amends for his rashness.

"I sent them a keg of tobacco and a dozen fancy pipes," he said. "If that doesn't get the curse lifted I'll send them something else.

"I'm not worried, but after all a curse is a curse. I've heard of people dying mysterious deaths on account of curses. It doesn't do my hot dog business any good, either."

With the tobacco and pipes, Kelly sent a letter explaining in great detail just why he couldn't pop over at the moment and put on the royal war paint.

"They told me they wanted to crown me," he explained, "but I had to tell them 'nix,' only in a very polite way. Now they want to crown me worse than ever."

Kelly gave his sizzling frankfurters a bit of a stir and then continued:

"Now you know I can't go over there and be their king. For one thing I sunburn very easily, and you can imagine what would happen to me if I sat around over there with nothing on but a crown and a pair of shorts.

Italians Fly South Atlantic In 10 Hours

Land Plane Sighted Off Brazil After Trip From Rome.

Natal, Brazil, Jan. 28 (AP).—Roaring across the South Atlantic in a trimotored land plane, four Italian fliers were reported to have crossed the Fernando Do Noronha Islands off the South American coast this afternoon, approximately ten hours after taking off from Dakar, French West Africa.

After only two hours of rest at Dakar, their second stop in a flight from Rome to Natal on a new South Atlantic air mail route, they hopped off at 5 a. m. (Eastern standard time). Dakar is approximately 1,650 miles from Natal.

Test Land Plane's Worth.

Under favorable flying conditions, and seeking to show that a land plane is better and faster than the same type of seaplane over a similar route, the fliers kept a pace estimated at 125 miles an hour.

A little more than eight hours out of Dakar, wireless advices brought word the fliers had passed over the German steamer Westphalen, anchored in midocean. In communication with the ship they reported normal gasoline consumption and favorable conditions generally.

Arrive at Dakar in Dark.

At Dakar there was no time for anything except refueling and a brief rest. It was still dark when the plane arrived. Search lights and rockets played on the sky in anticipation of their arrival.

When the tanks were filled, the men ate, smoked and chatted with a welcoming group, including some Italians. Then they entered the plane, made a good run down the field and were off on the transatlantic flight.

The fliers were in constant wireless communication with the African coast during the flight, and were soon picked up by receivers in South America.

67% of PWA Roads Started

"Striking progress" on the $400,000,000 Federal aid highway program was claimed yesterday by Public Works Administrator Ickes, with the District of Columbia showing as one of the Nations' leaders.

A Nation-wide survey, Ickes said, showed 5,614 road projects, representing 67.6 per cent of the total allotment for highway work, advertised for contract. He said more than 133,000 men rae now working on 3,100 or more road projects financed by PWA funds.

This numbe, it was stated, will be increased materially when the program reaches its peak during the summer.

Reports also showed 4,852 projects awarded for construction, with 544 completed. In addition to the 133,000 employed at the work sites, many others were said to have been given employment indirectly.

The District of Columbia, Ickes said, placed second, with 16 of its 17 highway projects awarded. Kansas was first, and the District was followed by New York, Connecticut and New Hampshire.

Maryland, with only 33.9 per cent of its projects advertised by January 20, was included in the list of eight States having less than 50 per cent of their projects advertised.

Hyattsville Masonic Committees Listed

Mount Hermon Lodge, No. 179, A. F. and A. M., of Hyattsville, through Robert P. Straka, worshipful master, has announced the following committees for 1934:

New Delay Likely In Wynekoop Case

Illness Further Diagnosed as Tuberculosis.

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Counsel for Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop today said she probably will be unable to appear in Judge Philip J. Finnegan's court tomorrow, when her case is to be reassigned for trial on the charge of murdering her daughter-in-law, Rheta.

In addition to the heart ailment, which stopped her first trial, it was announced that she is suffering from tuberculosis, which doctors said began several years ago but recently has been aggravated by her lowered resistance.

Her attorney, Frank J. Tyrrell, said that he will not immediately ask for her release on bail.

Baden-Powell Unchanged.

Cost of 15-Year Building Program Is Estimated at $3,870,000; Speed Is Urged to Provide First-Class Facilities in Capital.

By Felix Bruner.

While immediate library expansion plans for Washington include enlargement of the Central Library and erection of the Georgetown and Petworth branches, library officials have worked out a 15-year building program, which, if carried out, would put Washington on a par with other cities of the country.

The proposed branches consist of four kinds, designated by library officials as A, B, C and D, according to size, cost, book stock and maintenance expenses.

The program calls for six more A branches, similar to the present Northeastern and Mount Pleasant branches. These would include Georgetown, Petworth, Dupont Circle, Downtown and Columbia Road. These branches would have an original book stock of about 35,000 volumes and would cost about $150,000 each.

Other Branches.

B branches, of which the present Southeastern branch is an example, would cost $115,000 to $125,000 each and would have an original book stock of about 20,000 volumes. The program calls for 10 such branches. They would include Anacostia, Southwestern, Eckington, Shaw (Sixth street and Rhode Island avenue), Cathedral, Brightwood, Howard, Standards (at Bureau of Standards), Woodridge and Trinidad.

C branches, of which the present Takoma Park branch is an example, would cost up to $75,000 each and would have an original book stock of about 15,000. The program calls for eight more of these branches: Sixteenth street, Chevy Chase, Cleveland avenue, Brookland, Tenley, Congress Heights, Keene (in Keene School) and Wesley Heights.

D branches (or subbranches) are to be housed in school buildings or rented quarters. They would have a book stock of about 5,000 volumes and would cost $5,000 to $7,000 each pear year to operate.

Cost Put at $3,870,000.

The grand total cost of this program, over a period of 15 years, was estimated at $3,870,000. Of this, about $440,000 would be for sites. Total maintenance expenses for the library system during the last fiscal year were $393,784. This represents a cut in appropriations, in the face of a greatly increased demand for service. It is estimated that, should the entire program of extension be accomplished, maintenance costs would be about $1,300,000 annually. This, however, might conceivably be reduced.

The extension program outlined here is something approaching an ideal, but in the opinion of George F. Bowerman, librarian, and members of the Library Board, it is a goal toward which the District should constantly strive. Much of this program was conceived before the extent of the depression was realized and it necessarily has been slowed down.

However, it is pointed out that sites for branch libraries are becoming increasingly hard to obtain, that neighborhoods have been building up and real estate values increasing, making it obvious that the longer development and expansion is delayed the more expensive it will become.

PWA Money Asked.

An appeal has been made for Public Works money to pay for a part of the expansion. One argument for such an appeal is the fact that a comparatively small amount of public money ever has been expended for Washington library buildings. The Central Library and three of the branches, Takoma Park, Southeastern and Mount Pleasant, were the gifts of Andrew Carnegie. The only branch library building erected entirely with public funds s the newer Northeastern branch.

Some library statisticians have pointed to the fact that Washington actually has millions of books in its libraries. While this is true, as has been pointed out before, these books are not available to the public. The Public Library is the only one the facilities of which are open to every one. In this connection, a statement by Herbert Putnam, librarian of the Library of Congress, is interesting.

Special Needs Cited.

He said:

"Except as regard member of Congress and their families (for whom the Library of Congress is 'all kinds of a library'), the Library of Congress is for residents of the District purely a reference library; the only loans of books which it makes outside of official use being to a few persons engaged in special research requiring books not ordinarily to be found in a municipal library.

"This leaves to the library of the District, besides a considerable amount of ordinary reference use which its location conveniences, the entire outside services to (1) the general reader, (2) the schools and the ordinary student, and with a population of the character of that of Washington the needs of these groups are such as require and justify facilities equal to those of any municipal library in a city of 500,000 people."

(Associated Press.)

The public debt of Federal, State, county and municipal governments was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have aggregated $39,171,587,000 for 1932. Since that time the Federal Government's gross debt increased $3,051,622,000 to the end of June last year, bringing the total to $42,223,249,000.

The gross debt reported for 1932 of all public indebtedness of States, counties, cities, and all other subdivisions with the power to incur debt, amounted to $19,684,577,000, or an average of $158.10 for each person. Ten years ago the aggregate debt was $10,255,458,000, or an average of $94.32 for each person, while 20 years ago it was $4,379,079,000, or an average of $45.11 for each person.

The Federal Government's gross debt on June 30 last was $19,487,010,000, or an average of $156.12 per person. In 1923 it was $22,349,688,000, an average of $200.10 per person, and in 1913, before the World War, it was $1,566,863,480, or $12.58 per capita.

Of the total gross debt, exclusive of the Federal Government, State governments represented 14.7 per cent; counties, 12.3 per cent; cities, towns, villages and boroughs, 51.5 per cent; school districts, 11 per cent; townships, 1.8 per cent, and other civil divisions, 8.9 per cent.

The total for States was $2,895,845,000; counties, $2,423,306,000; cities, towns, villages, and boroughs, $10,088,352,000; school districts, $2,172,375,000; townships, $353,306,000, and other civil divisions, $1,751,393,000.

Kelly Sends Peace Plea to Africans think I'd want any rings in my nose.

And Behind It All.

It was just a week ago that Kelly received a letter from Martin Johnson, the explorer, now in Kenya colony, East Africa, saying the Swahilis had taken umbrage at his lackadaisical attitude toward their royal summons.

Enclosed was a letter from Manual and Hussaini, the native boys who found a friend in Kelly, when they came to New York with a shipment of Johnson's baby gorillas two years ago. Kelly gave them ice cream and hot dogs—"just treated them like human beings instead of cannibals," he explained—and when they went back they had him elected king.

"I suppose they told the rest of the tribe that life would be all hot dogs and ice cream if I came over," was Kelly's theory.

Their letter was written in Ki-Swahili, and it was only yesterday that Kelly heard of a man who might be able to translate it.

"I'm going to take it down to him this week," he said, "and find out just where I stand."

HoneymoonKilling Probe Jails Bride

Californian Shot to Death in New Jersey.

Mount Holly, N. J., Jan. 28 (AP). From police in widely separated cities, Burlington County detectives today sought information concerning Millard S. F. Edouard, 45, of Los Angeles, found dead of a bullet wound while on his honeymoon trip to New York.

Edouard's body was discovered yesterday in his automobile on a road near Florence. There was a bullet wound in the head. A pistol was found on the floor of the car.

His bride of two weeks, Mrs. Anna May Edouard, remained in the county jail here while the investigation went forward.

Dean Acheson's Father, 76, Dies In Connecticut

Had Varied Career in Army, Business and Church.

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 28 (AP). The Right Rev. Edward Campion Acheson, 76, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Connecticut and father of Dean G. Acheson, former undersecretary of the Treasury, died today at his home.

A native of England, Bishop Acheson led a varied career, in the church, in business and in war.

He was a veteran of the Imperial forces that put down the second Riel rebellion in the Canadian Northwest and received a medal for bravery in rescuing a wounded officer under fire. In the World War he served with the American Red Cross and was chaplain of the Twenty-sixth (Yankee) Division.

Before studying for the church, he was in business in England and in Toronto.

His son, Dean Acheson, a Washington and Maryland lawyer, resigned recently as undersecretary of the Treasury.

Dr. Acheson had been in the service of the Protestant Episcopal Church, both in the United States and Canada for 40 years before he was elected Bishop of the Connecticut Diocese in 1928.

He was ordained to the ministry June 10, 1888, at Toronto, Ontario, and a year later he came to this country as curate of St. George's, New York.

His widow, the former Eleanor Gooderham, of Toronto, survives, as do his sons, Dean and E. Campion Acheson, jr., of Westport, and a married daughter, Mrs. Margaret Platt, of New Canaan.

$600,000,000 Loaned to 776 Closed Banks

More than $600,000,000 has been loaned by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to enable receivers and liquidating agents of closed banks to pay liquidating dividends to depositors, it is shown in figures made public yesterday by C. B. Merriam, chairman of the Deposit Liquidation Board and director of the corporation. Half of the total has been loaned by the liquidation board since its creation on last October 17.

A total of 776 loans has been authorized by the board to help liquidate 1,400 banks closed in 1933 with deposits of more than $2,000,000,000. Actual disbursements have amounted to approximately $146,000,000, with additional disbursements being made at the rate of several millions of dollars daily.

Nearly 450 men are serving without compensation on special advisory and appraisal committees in the 12 Federal Reserve districts. They appraise collateral submitted and make recommendations on loans. The Merriam statement praises members of the committee for their zeal.

"It is the general feeling," the statement read, "that loans to receivers and liquidating agents are aiding materially the recovery program because they are making available to hundreds of thousands of depositors money which is very badly needed to most of them and which would otherwise be made available only after the slow processes of forced liquidation. By borrowing on assets of closed banks instead of selling them or otherwise forcing their liquidation, receivers and liquidating agents are able to conserve values and liqudate trusts in an orderly manner. This not only preserves the value of the particular assets in their charge, but also protects values generally which would otherwise be depressed."

Pastor Prays Girl Will Win in Films

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—A clergyman today offered a prayer at high mass for Anna Sten, the Slavic peasant girl, who will make her American motion picture debut this week.

He was the Rev. Nicholas Kedroff, archpriest of the Greek Catholic Church and dean of St. Nicholas Russian Cathedral.

Father Kedroff, in his prayer, pointed out that Providence should have a special interest in Miss Sten, who six years ago was a peasant girl in Kiev, the Ukraine. The congregation chanted an "Amen."

47 Cents a Day Each Keeps Paupers in 'Partnership' Home

Staunton, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). —The daily per capita cost of operating the District Home, near Waynesboro, has been reduced from $0.6593 in 1928 to $0.46836 in 1933.

The District Home is the institution where Augusta, Alleghany, Albemarle, Bath and Rockbridge Counties and the City of Charlottesville place their paupers. Modern in every respect, the home takes the place of the old "poor house," which each of the six units formerly operated.

On the basis of the 30-day month, the per capita cost for 1933 was $14.05 per month. This was a reduction of $2.46 from the figure for 1932.

The net cost of operation last year was $10,310; in 1928, $12,388; 1929, $13,448; 1930, $13,296; 1931, $15,148; 1932, $12,117.

The six units pay their share on the basis of the number of inmates from each. In 1933 the cost to each was as follows: Albemarle, $3,081; Alleghany, $707; Augusta, $2,799; Bath, $1,001; Rockbridge, $1,956; Charlottesville, $592.

December 31, 1933 the units had the following number of inmates: Albemarle, 20; Alleghany, 6; Augusta, 16; Bath, 4; Rockbridge, 12; Charlottesville, 3. Stafford County keeps one person at the home, but is not strictly one of the "partners." Of the 62 total, 30 are white males; 18 white females; 9 Negro males; 5 Negro females.

Officers of the board of control are: J. Frank Harper, of Waynesboro, chairman; Charles K. Yancey, of Waynesboro, secretary-treasurer; John M. McLaughlin, of Bath County; W. W. Whitmore, of Rockbridge County; C. Purcell McCue, of Albemarle County; Allen M. Stull, of Alleghany County, and George T. Huff, of Charlottesville.

NO END of BOOKS

By Theodore Hall.

Three English Novels.

For some 40 years Eden Phillpotts has been writing novels about Dartmoor. Few of our contemporary writers have taken so to heart the dictum of Voltaire's "Candide"—that we must cultivate our own gardens. Quietly, without much heralding, Phillpotts has turned out novel upon novel dealing with his neighbors in the west of England. One or two counties, by this intentness, he made universal.

Now, at 72, this literary Titan still holds his joy in writing. There is no stalling. If the fact implies a secret, it must be that he never espoused a cause. No rank enthusiasm led him into idolizing or its converse, cudgelling. No hatred pushed him into the vain catharsis of satire. He was content to watch, to describe, and to trust in craftsmanship, and that quietness gave him long life. It is a recipe little used on this side of the Atlantic.

His latest novel, "A Shadow Passes" (MacMillan, $2.), completes "Bred in the Bone" and "Witch's Cauldron" as the last of the trilogy termed "The Book of Avis." But it is a story in itself, the tale of Avis Bryden's last years, and may be read separately.

Mrs. Bryden, 46, strong-minded and conscienceless, committed a murder, planned another, held over her son the power of this evil. Peter thought her mad and hugged close his loyalty. He kept his knowledge even from his wife, allowing her still to admire the clear-thinking elder woman. But his "cup of sorrow" was always with him. When his mother poisoned the drunken, ne'er-do-well son of her best friend because she thought it for the best, Peter's cup stood brimful. Yet he kept silent and dug the grave. Forthright to the end, his mother faced cancer and solved it in the way which fitted her. Her last lines to Peter read: "Your God's heard you, my lad, and took the cup away."

Phillpotts has told this grim story with a kind of restraint that makes it but the more terrible. His delicate, faintly archaic writing transfers far more emotion to the reader than would a brazen recital. You might call him a writer by the Beatitudes, for the accumulating force of this minor masterpiece comes from its simplicity. "A Shadow Passes" is very much worth reading.

* * * *

If English writers have learned far better than our own writers the methods noted above, it is also plain that some of Phillpotts' countrymen have learned them too well.

Martin Armstrong writes sweet, pastoral verse, and very sweet stories. But simplicity becomes something of an irritation in his latest novel, "The Foster-Mother" (Harcourt Brace, $2). It tells the story of two young people who are left in the charge of their dead mother's sister-in-law. Mrs. Murdle grows to be a positive ogre, a gorilla-like creature, swathed in black satin. She hounds Judith, the little girl, over her arithmetic lessons. She locks her in her room and scares the wits out of her. Young Tom, back from school and more assured, rebels. The suspense comes from their efforts to see their old nurse, Janet, or visit friends for a holiday. At the end of the book Judith falls in love. Mrs. Murdle would have poisoned this happiness also, but a second stroke does away with her.

The book is artlessly charming, or unbearably simple-minded, according to your temperament or mood. If you have patience to hear an orthodox recital of childhood, you will like it.

* * * *

Far more ambitious is Richard Church's "The Prodigal Father" (John Day, $2.50). This tale of a bass-fiddle player in the Covent Garden Orchestra who has no understanding of his duty-ridden and invalid wife stands as an excellent piece of work.

George Cromwell was at home only with his music. Fumblingly he tried to sympathize with his wife to cross the chasm. But every time something balked him, usually his 20-year-old son, Robert, devoted to the mother, bitterly antagonistic to the father. So George turned for understanding to Mary Marsh, whose husband had left her. When Mrs. Cromwell died, the son also turned to Mary—an odd but very moving complication which the author solves a bit grandiloquently.

Yet aside from the story's sometimes taking the bit in its teeth and running off toward easy conclusions, it is firm, penetrating work. Church disdains to present his characters as types. George is both easy-going and capable of understanding. Robert pushes hard toward a theological career, and then suddenly sees himself in his immaturity. Mary is a splendid character, straightforward to what she loves and yet quite able to see the costs. The author has woven their lives into an adept and delicate novel.

Richard Church worked in the Civil Service, wrote criticisms for the London literary magazines, is now advisory editor to the English publishing house of Dent. He is the author of nine books of verse, two previous novels and a biography of Mary Shelley.

Pinchot Is Removed To N. Y. Sanitarium

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who has been recovering from an attack of shingles at St. Luke's Hospital, was transferred today to Leroy sanitarium.

Attendants there said that his condition was greatly improved, but that they did not know how long it would be necessary for him to remain.

Russian Debt Accord Is Near, Say Observers

(Associated Press.)

The harmonizing influence of recognition has aided negotiations toward the settlement of the 16-year-old Russian debt question until a definite understanding may be reached soon, some observers foreseeing it within a month.

Involved are the $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 in Russian debts due this country, and Soviet Counter-claims because of American participation in the Siberian expedition. Then, too, there are private claims which citizens of this country have put forward.

The parleys, in continuation since —and even before recognition— have progressed until it was said yesterday in authoritative circles that a decision by President Roosevelt on American trade policy might be about all that is necessary before an announcement.

Issues Tangled Up.

Debt settlement, credits to Russia, foreign trade policy and closely related subjects are so interlaced at present that President Roosevelt must pull the proper string before the skein can be untangled.

In negotiations with France and Great Britain, the Soviet proposed a settlement which provided that if satisfactory credits were made available it would pay the debt and in addition repay the credits. The Soviet offer, however, was not accepted.

The Soviet, it was reported yesterday, has made a somewhat similar proposal to the United States.

President Roosevelt has under consideration two reports which have a bearing on future trade policies. One from the foreign trade policy committee, made up of experts from the various Government branches, contains findings on general policy and tariffs.

Export Agency Proposed.

The other, from George N. Peek, former agricultural adjustment administrator, is understood to propose the establishment of a foreign trade export corporation, which would have power to authorize or recommend foreign credit extension.

Several steps which have made the debt settlement apparently easier have been taken since recognition.

The Treasury, by lifting the embargo on Russian gold, barred since 1920 because of the question of legal ownership, has made it possible for Russia to use a portion of its $50,000,000 annual production for purchases in this country.

Pulp Ban Also Lifted.

The Treasury also has lifted the ban on Russian pulpwood and matches, previously barred on charges of convict labor production and dumping.

An agreement has been reached for a mutual reduction of tonnage dues and port charges under which American vessels now pay only one-sixth of the former levels.

Entrance of Russians to the United States has been simplified through abolition of discriminatory regulations under which they were forced to secure passport visas.

Scientist Thinks We're Not Alone

now have, have had, or will have planets revolving around them, depending on the stage of evolution they have reached. Scientists do not agree whether the stars are of different age or the same age.

Says Sun Wa Largr.

The planets were built up by a snowball-like process with two atoms adhering to each other and then more joining the pile, according to Prof. Alter's theory, until a few large bodies finally were amassed out of the swarm.

When the planets were formed, the sun was far larger than now, perhaps 100 times as large, says Prof. Alter, and so had a correspondingly larger atmophere. The planets, therefore, were built up from atoms of gas gathered from a "collecting zone" that may have been several hundred million miles thick.

As the un shrank in size and the planets grew larger, the latter gradually circled away to their present distances from the sun, but still were forced to keep revolving around it by its force of gravity.

Picture of Augusta County's First Attorney Given Court

Staunton, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—There has just been hung on a wall in Augusta Circuit Courthouse a picture of the county's first commonwealth's attorney — Gabriel Jones, 1724-1806.

The picture was presented to Judge Joseph A. Glasgow, of Augusta Circuit Court by Judge Phillip Williams, of Winchester, and Judge Glasgow gave the picture to the county court.

Gabriel Jones was born near Williamsburg, Va., of Welsh parentage, May 17, 1724, and when a child returned to England with his widowed mother for his education. He returned to America and was King's attorney for Frederick County in 1743. He came to Augusta County in 1745, to fill the same office—and thus became this county's first counsel for the State. He died here in 1806 at the age of 82.

An oil painting, owned by Mrs. C. Grattan Crawford, of Kernstown, near Winchester; a descendant of Gabriel Jones in the fifth generation, was the original of the photograph.

Baker Pleads World Court Ratification

Fulfill Party Pledges, Mrs. George Wyeth Urges in Statement.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Immediate adherence of the United States to the World Court to fulfill pledges of the Democratic and Republican platforms was urged today by Newton D. Baker and Mrs. George A. Wyeth, president of the Women's National Republican Club.

Mrs. Wyeth, chairman of the National committee of Republican Women for the World Court, and Baker said in a statement that ratification could be accomplished quickly without disrupting the domestic recovery program and would be a quieting influence on the international situation.

"At the moment when, as we all know, other nations are seriously facing the prospect of war as a method of settling their differences or adjusting their conflicting national ambitions," Baker declared, "it is directly important for us and for the world for the United States to endorse clearly the principle of judicial settlement.

Situation Is Met.

"Yesterday, it was eight years since the Senate, by a vote of 76 to 17, declared that the United States should adhere to the court if five conditions were met. That these conditions are met by the three treaties now pending seems to me beyond bona fide question. There are indeed times," said Mrs. Wyeth, "when our situation at home must take precedence, but to defer action (on the treaties) year after year on the ground of urgent domestic legislation is logic of the most superficial variety.

"It would be shortsighted not to take into account the fact that world-wide indorsement of the principle of judicial settlement would contribute directly to that international sense of security and stability upon which, in the long run, even our own National recovery must depend."

Simultaneously with the statement of Baker and Mrs. Wyeth, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who has recently returned from a conference in Washington of 11 National women's organizations, announced that the two-thirds vote for ratification "seems certain to exist."

Line-Up Claimed in Poll.

According to a poll made by organizations with which Mrs. Catt is associated, and announced by her, the line-up in the Senate is:

Carolina Town Hit By $1,000,000 Fire

109 Buildings Destroyed at Wrightsville Beach.

Wilmington, N. C., Jan. 28 (AP).—Nine blocks of Wrightsville Beach, island summer resort 12 miles from here, were swept by fire today and 109 buildings destroyed.

The flames, starting from an undetermined cause in the Kitty Cottage, a hotel, spread along 2,500 feet of beach front buildings, burning them all. The Oceanic Hotel was one of the first buildings to fall. A high wind was blowing.

An official of the Tidewater Power Co. estimated the loss in excess of $1,000,000.

Supervisor Named.

Tazewell, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Judge A. C. Buchanan has named Harry W. Bane, of Cedar Bluff, to fill the office of supervisor for the Maiden Spring district, made vacant by the registration of John DeBorad to become community safety director under the CWA.

Velvet

$5,883 Cash, Securities Boost Estate.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Heirs of William Elmer Agee, who died January 22, were surprised to learn upon opening Agee's lockbox that they were wealthier by $5,883.

Agee's personal estate has been estimated at $2,000 and real estate holdings were appraised at $2,000, which were believed to compose the entire estate before a safety deposit box in a local bank was opened, revealing the $5,883.

Marcellus W. Cheatham qualified as administrator of the estate and gave bond of $9,000. N. W. Phelps, J. H. Matthews, A. F. Rawson, E. E. West and C. S. Spindle were named as appraisers.

Heirs of Mr. Agee are his brother. He was single.

'Female Deadlier Than Male,' Axiom Holds for Mosquitoes

CARROLL SMITH, young scientific aid in the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Entomology, who weekly allows incubator mosquitoes to nourish themselves from his arm. Their other chief food is sugar water.

Agriculture Department Aid Calls Big Pest "Cleopatra."

Plague of monarchs and mendicants since the ice age, the pestiferous mosquito is feted and dined as a welcome guest in an especially constructed incubator at the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Entomology, 814 B street southwest.

The incubator is the handiwork of two young scientific aids at the bureau, and they built it of cardboard, wire, glass and wood collected from waste baskets. Inside, behind a protecting barrier of netting, dwell 200 adult aedes aegyptae, or yellow fever mosquitoes, classed as adults, and more than 1,000 larvae.

Once a week they enjoy a diet of human blood, and every day they nourish themselves on sugar-water kept plentifully near. Whenever the occasion arises, they are transported to the Bureau of Animal Industry, where they are allowed to bite horses, guinea pigs, rabbits and other animals for experimental purposes.

The youths who built the incubator and have charge of the insects are Carroll Smith, 24, of 901 Twentieth street northwest, and Robert Shosteck, 22, of 912 F street northeast.

Flock to Banquet

Every six or seven days Smith pulls up the netting and puts on a glove. Then he stands patiently as the mosquitoes perch upon his forearm, bite him, and nourish themselves on his blood. The process is not painful, Smith says, and the welts disappear within an hour. Furthermore, it's all part of the day's work, and necessary in producing healthy mosquitoes.

Smith, an Iowan, learned his entomology at George Washington University, as did Shosteck. He has been with the Department of Agriculture about two years.

When the mosquitoes have satisfied their appetites, they automatically leave Smith's arm, and buzz like pygmy air armadas inside their cage. They need no more blood until a week has passed.

The special work in mosquitoes is for a twofold purpose. Experiments with the yellow fever species is directly for the Bureau of Animal Industry, where the part the insect has to do in causing encephalomyelitis, or distemper and sleeping sickness among horses is being determined.

It is not believed the malady is brought about by aedes aegyptae alone, for in regions where this pest is unknown horses are fatally infected. But the mosquito has a definite relation to the disease, scientists feel.

Secondly, in working with ordinary woods mosquitoes, the bureau is performing a task for the CWA. Part of the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the CWA is stamping out breeding places for the common mosquito. Certain soils, found in swampy country, where the insects reproduce and grow in great numbers, are being examined.

Royal Line of Pests.

At present there are no common mosquitoes in the incubator. The aedes aegyptae, however, come of a long line, having been obtained in 1928. The mosquitoes now under examination are the direct descendants of their ancestors, four years ago. And, to a mosquito, four years represents ages.

"The average life of the mosquitoes in the incubator is several months," Smith said yesterday.

Male mosquitoes do not bite, but females do, Smith asserts.

"For instance," he observed yesterday as he removed his gloved hand from the incubator, "there is an especially large one, which always takes the lead in biting me, and seems to bite harder than the rest. The female of the species truly is deadlier than the male. I call this particular mosquito Cleopatra!"

Armed With Air Data, Lindberg Waits Quiz Call

By Martha Dalrymple.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is hard at work collecting and correlating facts and figures about the development of commercial aviation in this country preparatory to testifying before the Senate committee investigating ocean and air mail contracts, it was learned yesterday.

Lindbergh, who qualifies as one of the pioneers of the industry from the early days when he flew mail on the Chicago-St. Louis run, has followed the committee's hearings closely. He is anxious to present his story, including the time he was an unknown mail pilot, preparations for his historic solo flight to Paris, days when the present air-mail map was being laid out, and the boom times when he took a leading part in the commercial development as an official in various companies.

Lindbergh's name first came into the evidence before the committee when it was revealed he had been given $250,000 in Transcontinental Air Transport stock for services.

It is now learned the aviator paid an income tax or this sum as compensation for services rendered and did not claim exemption under the "gift" clause, which at that time was a part of the income tax law.

Letter Tells of Deal.

A letter was introduced in the committee record in which C. M. Keyes, then T. A. T. president, advised Lindbergh to consult his attorney about arrangements for the stock transfer "in order that all the records shall be clear for income tax purposes."

He also advised the flier to sell his stock and not put much of it in his own name, since the transfer would excite a lot of attention which is quite unnecessary.

It was thought at the time that the Bureau of Internal Revenue might be interested in a possible tax evasion, but the possibility has been eliminated by the revelation of Lindbergh's tax payment.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the investigating committee, said he does not know yet whether the famous aviator will be summoned.

It is now learned that, even though the committee does not officially request his appearance, Lindbergh at some later date, when the air mail query is more nearly complete, will requets he be given a hearing.

Wife Also May Testify.

Most of the large companies which operate on routes now included in teh air mail map are understood to be cooperating with Lindbergh, supplying him with material about phases of air development with which he is not personally familiar.

If the committee summons Lindbergh, it is felt it probably will be in connection with the investigation into subsidies granted lines to Central and South Ameirca, a field in which the flying colonel has done extensive pioneering.

In this connection there is a slight possibility his flying companion-wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, may be asked to supplement her husband's recitation.

Through evidence, Black has sought to show that in revamping the air mail map in 1930, small, independent lines, most of them pioneers on the routes, were discriminated against in the awarding of mail contracts.

Small Operators Shoved Aside.

It has been testified that former Postmaster General Brown suggested he would like to have the transcontinental routes divided among the large competing companies and that in order to effect this, the small operators were forced to sell out to the large holding companies after they found they could not compete without mail contracts.

The succesful lines, those which secured mail contracts and which today operate the long transcontinental routes, feel the present air mail map is the most economical and best serves the purpose of the Government in building a strong air force by permitting constant experimentation and development.

Europe Baffled By New Deal, Walsh Reports

Educator Says Foreigners Think It Just Another American Stunt.

"The New Deal is a complete enigma to Europe and is widely interpreted as one of those unpredictable extremes into which Americans love to rush in the grand manner," Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, said yesterday following his return from a tour of Europe.

Europeans today converse chiefly on two themes, Dr. Walsh said: The economic fate of Europe and the program of President Roosevelt.

Bookstalls are offering plentiful prophecies and treatises respecting the form of social control that shall follow the predicted breakdown of capitalism, he said.

Recalls Our Boasts.

"If we boasted the highest skyscrapers on the planet, the most automobiles of any country, the fastest trains on rails, the greatest wealth in the fewest pockets and the biggest and best in everything, it followed naturally that we would uphold the record by achieving the most resounding crash in history, to be followed by the biggest and best-advertised repentance," Dr. Walsh said.

"In consequence, the American scene is frequently compared to a revivalist meeting in the mood of Billy Sunday or Aimee Semple McPherson.

"But the true significance of the Roosevelt program has not escaped the more thoughtful observers. They realize that heroic measures were imperative and they are watching the experiment with an interest that is more than academic."

Sees War Menace.

Dr. Walsh said he regards the Austro-German frontier as the tinder box of Europe.

"Should the Nazi movement succeed in coercing Austria into the Third Reich, with the subsequent loss of Austria's independence as a sovereign state, there will be in all probability immediate military action from at least two European governments," Dr. Walsh added.

"Austria already is appealing to the world against the pressure from Berlin. Should she be unable to hold out and should a forced unification of German peoples result, war is spoken of as more than a probability."

Cuban Crowds Cheer Caffery

10,000 Hail Mendieta in Honoring Noted Patriot; Roosevelt Lauded.

Havana, Jan. 28 (AP).—Ten thousand Cubans paraded the streets of Havana today in a celebration that started out to be a tribute to the famous Cuban patriot, Jose Marti, but developed into a pro-Mendieta demonstration as well.

Headed by brass bands, the procession opened a period of celebration in which thousands of rifle and pistol shots were fired into the air while marchers danced and cheered for President Carlos Mendieta and Marti.

In was the eightieth anniversary of Marti's birth and Cubana Fortress fired a salute of 19 guns.

Hundreds of demonstrators crowded around Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative, as he left the embassy, and Mr. Caffery, President Roosevelt and the American people in general were praised in the shouts of the demonstrators.

Several hunderd American Marines and sailors were given shore liberty and most of them packed Tropical Stadium, where a team from the United States battleship Wyoming played baseball against a team of Cubans.

President Mendieta named a commission of three to study the prolonged Cuban electric strike situation and then retired to his country home to rest.

Jesus Correro, Luis Machado, a cousin of former President Gerardo Machado, and Eduardo Chibas, sr., were named to the commission.

North Carolina Artists to Give Concert Here

War Invalids to Be Honor Guests at Recital Wednesday Night.

Disabled war veterans will join with Washington officialdom and civic and social leaders as guests at the North Carolina State concert which is to be given at 8:30 Wednesday night in Constitution Hall.

The concert is sponsored by prominent men and women of North Carolina for the purpose of calling attention of the National Capital to the artistic and cultural development of the State. Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus heads the list of sponsors which includes Brig. Gen. A. E. Williams, president of the State society in the District, Mrs. Will Reynolds, Mrs. Frank Mebane and others. All expenses have been paid by the sponsors and no charge will be made for reserved seats for those invited.

Edouard Albion, barytone and former director general of the Washington National Opera, is to be the principal artist.

Leslie P. Spelman, director of music of Meredith College, Raleigh N. C., will give a recital. Miss Elizabeth Marshall Mauney, of Hickory, N. C., a young coloratura soprano, will make her concert debut outside North Carolina.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt have been invited. The veterans will be escorted by Red Cross workers.

Tickets for North Carolinians are being distributed through Miss Jane Elizabeth Newton, secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina State Society, who resides at the Chastleton apartments.

Two Roosevelt Dances Set in Prince Georges

Two dances for the benefit of President Roosevelt's Warm Springs Foundation are listed in Prince Georges County for tomorrow night.

One will be given by the Knights of Columbus, at Gibbons Hall, Upper Marlboro. Another will be given by the Young Mens' Democratic Club, of Charles County, at T. B., Md.

The Prince Georges County Young Men's Democratic Club held a dance last night at Beaver Dam Country Club for the benefit of the Foundation.

Science Learns Rats' Secret Of Curing Their Own Cancers

Isolate Substance Used; Plan Application to Humans.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—A recently found substance produced by rats to cure their own cancers was reported to the public for the first time today in a report from Columbia University.

It is an extract, one of four discoveries of the past year in great cancer laboratories, together described as "more important for the future study of cancer than anything which has been found concerning the disease since man began to observe it."

These signs of new hope, puzzling and as yet inapplicable to human cancer, were described by Dr. Francis Carter Wood, head of the Crocker Institute for Cancer Research at Columbia, in his annual report. Dr. Wood is also the editor of the American Journal of Cancer.

The rat extract was found by Prof. William H. Woglom, of the Crocker Institute. For years it had been known that when a cancer is grafted on a rat, his own body may produce a mysterious substance which cures the cancer.

Dr. Woglom obtained this substance by using cancer tissue like a sponge. He grafted cancer cells on a rat, leaving them there for a few days only. When he removed them he found the cells had soaked up from the rodent's body some of the unknown substance which the rat already had begun to manufacture for protection.

This extract had the power of killing cancer cells outside the rat's body, so that if mixed with a cancer graft, it prevented the cancer from "taking."

But when injected into the body of a rat already having cancer, the extract had no apparent effect. If Dr. Wood said, the investigators could find out what this substance is and how the rat uses it, they might make a horse produce a lot of it and use it for cancer treatment.

Bernard J. Williams Dies at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Bernard J. Williams, 57, was found dead in his bed at his home here yesterday.

At one time he was employed by the Cumberland Evening Times. He was a member of St. Patrick's Catholic Church and Cumberland Council, No. 586, Knights of Columbus. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Charles H. and Robert E. Williams, and two daughters, Miss Ruth Williams and Mrs. Frank Pendergast.

San Carloans Open Tonight With 'Boheme'

Puccini's Popular Opera Here First Time for Many Years.

With a performance of Puccini's "La Boheme," the San Carlo Grand Opera Company opens a week's engagement in the National Theater tonight. This famous touring organization, oldest of its kind in the United States, still is under the management of Fortune Gallo, who founded it nearly a quarter of a century ago.

"La Boheme" which has not been presented in Washington during recent years, was the first of Giacomo Puccini's operas to scare a popular success, and its instant popularity was the foundation for his subsequent career. The opera is in four acts. The libretto by Giuseppe Giacosa and Luigi Illica is based on episodes from Henri Burger's "Scenes de la Vie de Boheme." The first performance took place in Turin on February 1, 1896, and it was heard first in the United States in March, 1898, at San Francisco.

Paris in Locale.

The "Bohemia" referred to in the title was the Latin Quarter of Paris during the early part of the nineteenth century. To many, this opera still remains the most attractive of all Puccini's excellent works because of the freshness and spontaneity of its melodies and the sentiment of its plot. One can well understand its popularity, for it combines the gay and the pathetic in a fascinating picture of student life.

Much of the story of "La Boheme" must have recalled to Puccini his own early days in Milan, where he shared a poorly furnished loft with three other music students. Often he went hungry, and frequently he was obliged to compose on strips of wrapping paper when he could not buy ruled sheets. He endured his privations with inextinguishable good humor, accepting them as an unpleasant but unavoidable part of every artistic career.

Leading Singers.

In tonight's performance the leading roles will be sung by Bianca Saroya (Mimi), Dmitri Onofrei (Rudolfo), Ethel Fox (Musetta), Mario Valle (Marcello), Stefan Kozakevich (Schaunard) and Harold Kravitt (Colline). The orchestra will be conducted by Carlo Peroni, who has been the musical director of the company for ten years.

The repertoire of the San Carloans for the remainder of the week will be as follows:

Tomorrow night, "Madama Butterfly," with Hizi Koyke, Japanese soprano, in the title role; Wednesday matinee, "Martha;" Wednesday night, "Aida;" Thursday night, "Carmen," with Ina Bourskaya, of the Metropolitan, as guest artist in the same part; Friday night, "Lohengrin," sung in German; Saturday matinee, Humperdinck's fairy tale opera, "Hansel and Gretel," sung in English; Saturday night, "Il Trovatore."

President Drives To Sabbath Rites

Leaves Mansion Workroom First Time in Week.

Leaving his executive office workroom and the White House study for the first time in a week, President Roosevelt yesterday motored to church.

The day saw one of the few departures from the intensive program of work the President has been following since he inaugurated his program of emergency legislation on the first of the year, according to the Associated Press.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt last night entertained a few personal friends at one of the Sunday night suppers of the Presidential household. A week-end guest was Hartley Howe, son of the Presidential secretary and adviser, Louis M. Howe.

6 Million Children Lack Food, Says Miss Perkins

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The number of ill-nourished children in the United States was placed today at upward of 6,000,000 by Secretary Frances Perkins of the Labor Department, in an address to the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

"The percentage of malnutrition among boys and girls of school age," she said, "icreased from 13.5 in 1927 to 21.1 in 1932, as shown by the examination of more than 300,000 children each year."

Chicago Firemen Fight Gale-Driven Loop Blaze

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Whipped by winds of gale intensity, flames tonight attacked a building occupied by a commission house in the 800 block on West Randolph street and spread rapidly to other buildings, threatening to destroy an entire block.

The major portion of the city's fire-fightin gapparatus was in use.

Snakes Come Out Early in Maryland.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Snakes are appearing about two months before the usual end of their hibernation period in this section.

Pupils in the Blair's Valley School captured a copperhead snake, one of the most poisonous of reptiles found in this section, and brought it here to exhibit. The snake was 33 inches long.

The unusually mild weather of the past week is believed to have caused the snake to believe that spring is at hand, for he was found enjoying the warm rays of the sun on a rock near the schoolhouse.

"Well, I see where the United States, acting through the CWA, has recognized Cuba."

"They've got a good president in Cuba now. Some feller named Rudy Faye or something like that."

"I thought it was Wynekoop."

"No. You're mixed up. Wynekoop is the name of that ship Admiral Byrd is on."

* * * *

"What did we want to recognize Cuba for in its present condition?"

"It had something to do with our economic policy. We have to revalue Havana so American investors will know what chance they got of getting their money back or something."

"I see that Senator Glass says it is a big mistake to impound the Cubans."

"I'm with the senator. I can't see how we can get a Cuban back to the 1929 level just by changing the old laws of supply and demand."

"What do you think of the Lincoln Ellsworth expedition?"

"I think all those trips to Geneva are a waste of time, and that Ellsworth can't accomplish any more there than Admiral Byrd did."

"I saw Byrd's name in the news again the other day. What's he doing now?"

"He and a fellow named Wyatt Earp are in Washington arguing for a central bank through which the NRA can get all the money it wants without a lot of fuss about fixing the value of the dollar through CWA and the League of Nations."

"I thought Byrd was in Little America."

"No. That's Col. Ruppert. He just made a trip to the South Pole on the schooner Jim Farley. They're looking for silver."

"Well, it's a funny world, but I think things look better, don't you?"

"Yes. The American pound has gone back to 16 ounces in London, Emma Goldman has returned to the Yankees, they've cut Al Smith's salary to $35,000 a year and Prof. Gandhi is to see that the dollar doesn't fall below 50 cents even in cold weather. I feel better about everything."

"So do I. With the Gulf Stream coming closer all the time, we can't lose."

Broader Probe Of Bankruptcy Courts Sought

(Associated Press.)

The House Judiciary Committee plans to investigate practices of Federal judges in bankruptcy and receivership cases until it has determined whether there is need of additional legislation or whether any of the jurists should be removed.

This was disclosed yesterday by Chairman Sumners (Democrat), Texas, as the House prepared to act on a resolution before it extending until next June 30, the time allowed the committee to complete its inquiry.

The study of how Federal judges are handling bankruptcy and receivership cases, begun during the Congressional recess, will continue to center in Chicago.

Data Is Collected.

Hearings were held there concerning Judge Charles E. Woodward's actions by a subcommittee headed by Representative McKeown (Democrat), Oklahoma, and an investigator has gathered data on receivership and bankruptcy activities of other Chicago Federal courts.

Chairman Sumners said while the inquiry was National in scope, it was considered the Chicago inquiry would be sufficient to determine necessity of other investigations.

"There is a chance that we may discover abuses that can be corrected by legislation," Sumners said. "But mainly the policy should be, when abuses of power are found, to take the man from the office instead of taking the power from the office.

"Generally, the Federal courts are presided over by a high class of patriotic judges. However, some abuses may have crept in."

Probes Were Varied.

The inquiry last summer included an investigation by a subcommittee headed by Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, into receiverships by the Irving Trust Co., New York.

Free Mooney, Miners Urge

Scottsboro Release Is Another Resolution Before Session.

Indianapolis, Jan. 28 (AP).—Freedom for Thomas Mooney and Warren Billings, and for the nine colored youths involved in the Scottsboro, Ala., case is demanded in numerous resolutions awaiting consideration by the United Mine Workers' convention, which resumes here tomorrow.

Another proposed resolution attracting some interest recommends that President John L. Lewis and other union officials petition congress for a Federal tax on natural gas, fuel oil and electricity generated by gas, oil and water power.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will address the miners tomorrow. Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, and Mrs. Virginia E. Jenckes, representative in Congress from the Sixth Indiana District, will speak Tuesday.

At the conclusion of the convention, President Lewis and the other international officials will return to Washington to make preparations for the NRA coal hearings to be resumed February 12.

Ooh! It's a Headache Trying To Figure Law, Without Rum

If You Would Travel and Imbibe, a Legal Course Would Be Aid.

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—A traveller in the United States must be a person of versatile drinking habits, if he is inclined to indulge, a survey of recently enacted and proposed State and liquor laws revealed today.

One can not stand at a bar to drink liquor in Michigan, or in Chicago, or to drink beer in Olympia, Wash. You must be seated at tables to drink liquor in Delaware, Missouri, Montana, Ohio and Buffalo.

Pennsylvania bans liquor sales across bars except in clubs. Places licensed to sell beer may serve it over a bar to patrons in permanent seats, but if the proprietor replaces his beer license with a liquor license he can sell neither beer nor liquor across the bar, only to patrons seated at tables. Pennsylvania drug stores may sell liquor, but can not mix it for drinks unless the proprietor is a licensed manufacturer.

Buffalo, N. Y., imbibers may do their drinking in public view, but the drinks must be mixed behind a screen.

Too Hot for Firemen.

Connecticut fire officials claim the State control law contravenes all fire ordinances. A lower court ruling that the State liquor commission must issue licenses to druggists for selling of liquor has been taken by the State to the State supreme court.

Wyoming is constitutionally dry, but a recent law permits physicians to prescribe liquor without restrictions.

One can buy liquor bottled in 1-ounce containers in Ohio.

Colorado's State liquor stores must close between 10 p. m. and 7 a. m., and no Sundays, holidays and election days, but drug stores may dispense liquor 24 hours a day.

Missouri merchants wishing to obtain permits to sell liquor in packages must show a stock valued at $1,500 aside from liquor and fixtures.

California law allows sale of liquor in packages only.

Only Minors Barred.

Reno, Nev., law forbids saloons to deny entrance to any one but minors.

The Kansas Supreme Court has left the question of "intoxicated" to individual juries to determine in separate cases where 3.2 per cent beer is involved. Hard liquor is not legal.

Texas is considering allowing importation of liquor for private use, not sale. Imported beverages would be taxed.

Idaho is considering using any liquor revenue it may get to educate against drinking.

A bill before the Iowa Legislature would call for revocation of permit to purchase liquor if the licensee simulated drunkenness.

Keep That Seal Intact.

A clause in the proposed Illinois law would make it illegal to transport liquor in a bottle with the seal broken, designed to curtail drunken driving and romancing in parked automobiles.

Wines and brandies can be made in Arkansas but not sold there, except that grape growers may consume 100 gallons yearly.

If you are a resident of Michigan, the State liquor commission will order for you any spirits which it does not have in stock. The law forbids the commission to make more than 40 per cent profit on the deal.

Beer taxes in Oklahoma help finance public schools, although State Superintendent of Schools John Vaughan has said the schools "do not want beer money."

Oregon restaurants and hotels may not sell liquor of more than 14 per cent strength, yet patrons may "bring their own" and drink it there.

A sandwich or a bowl of pretzels makes a cafe or restaurant within the meaning, respectively, of New Mexico and Arizona laws governing places where liquor is sold.

Coolidge Funeral Services Today

Brigadier General's Widow Dies Here at 85.

Funeral services for Mrs. Sophia Lowry Coolidge, 85, who died at her home here Friday, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be beside the grave of her husband, Brig. Gen. Charles Austin Coolidge, who was a cousin of the late President Coolidge.

Mrs. Coolidge, a native of Philadelphia, had lived in the District about six years, coming here from Detroit following the death of her husband. Gen. Coolidge had gone to Detroit in 1903 after he was retired from the Army. He died in 1926.

In Detroit Mrs. Coolidge became prominent in social and patriotic circles. She was a former national president of the Dames of the Loyal Legion, a leader in the Colonial Dames and a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was decorated by the French government for her work during the World War.

Her nearest relatives surviving are two cousins, Mrs. P. W. Hood, of Detroit, and Mrs. John W. Roder, of this city.

N. Y. Awaits Farley Committee Choice

Upstate Man Suggested for National Body.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Herald-Tribune says the new Democratic national committeeman from New York probably will be from up-State unless Postmaster General Farley, who is resigning as national and State chairman, should decide to take the post.

Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, the paper says, is reluctant to become committeeman because he is an attorney and would have to limit his practice under rules laid down by President Roosevelt against committee members handling Government cases.

Farley is expected soon to recommend a successor to the late John H. McCooey as Brooklyn leader.

3-Cent Air Letter Proposed in House

Bill Would Make Airmail Self-Supporting.

A bill designed to make air mail self-supporting and remove it from the subsidy classification, has been introduced in the House by Representative Thomas S. McMillan, of South Carolina, member of the Appropriations Committee.

Close examination and checking of financial operations of air mail lines is authorized and required of the Postoffice Department, Representative McMillan pointed out.

Reduction of the air mail postage rate, introduction of a 2-cent air lettergram and a 2-cent air post card, are also authorized in the bill to popularize the use of air mail and increase postal receipts.

New Universe Space Theory Gives Each Molecule 7 Feet

75,000,000 Milky Ways Exists, California Savant Thinks.

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—A new idea of the immensity of space in the universe is given by a scientist's computation that if all the molecules in the universe were distributed equally, each would be 7 feet from its nearest neighbor.

This means that if all the countless stars in the known universe were ground up into the finest kind of dust each tiny particle would have as much room as the inside of a large automobile in which to bounce around without a collision. And these dust particles would be infinitely smaller than the ordinary dust particle, for they would consist merely of a few atoms tied together in a molecule.

This computation, made by Prof. William D. MacMillan, of the University of Chicago, is based on the latest estimate that there are 75,000,000 great "island universes" or star clouds like the milky way scattered through the space that our largest telescopes now can penetrate.

New Star Census Taken.

This is the estimate of Dr. Edwin Hubble, of Mount Wilson Observatory, Calif., who has been taking a new census of the numbers of these star clouds.

Each of these nebulae is a giant star-system comparable to the "local universe" of our milky way, containing billions of stars and so huge it would take light traveling at its speed of 186,000 miles a second 100,000 years to cross it.

With the world's largest telescope at Mount Wilson astronomers can "see" as far out into space as light can travel in 300,000,000 years.

The "known universe" therefore is a sphere 600,000,000 light years across, or 3,600,000,000,000,000,000,000 (36 plus 20 ciphers) miles. Within this sphere the 75,000,000 nebulae are scattered at approximately equal intervals. Beyond the sphere's present boundaries lie vaster reaches of space, as yet unexplored by any telescope.

Part of Sky Counted.

If all the matter in the 75,000,000 nebulae were divided into small pieces each weighing one gram, as much as a drop of water about the size of a marble, each piece would be 62,500 miles from its nearest neighbor.

While Dr. Hubble has not actually counted a total of 75,000,000 nebulae in the heavens, he arrives at the figure from a sample area of the sky, in which the nebulae actually were counted. Assuming there are about as many nebulae throughout the sky as in the sample area, he gets the figure of 75,000,000.

Four Men Beset OnePoliceman; He Jails Them

In single-handed combat with four prisoners, a Second Precinct policeman emerged victorious early yesterday, after sending one of his assailants to the hospital and booking all four under assault and disorderly charges.

Policeman B. R. Torrence went to 1022 Ninth street northwest, to investigate a complaint. He said he was met at the door by Franklin Hall, 40. Words were exchanged, the policeman declared, when, suddenly, Hall grabbed his nightstick and struck him.

While arresting Hall, Torrence was grabbed around the neck by another man, later identified as Reginald Thornton, 39, of 1117 Eighth street northwest, and both Hall and Thornton struck him, the policeman reported.

Torrence said he regained his nighstick and used it to subdue the two men. While waiting at a patrol box at Ninth and M streets northwest, Torrence said he was attacked by a third and a fourth man, who attempted to west his prisoners from him.

The policeman again resorted to his club and succeeded in holding the four until help arrived.

Thornton was treated at Freedmans Hospital for severe lacerations to his head. The policeman suffered minor injuries. The other men gave names of Charles Levister, 23, of 1115 Ninth street northwest, and Lavors Jones, 34, of 1029 Ninth street northwest.

Man Claims 3Thugs In Car Robbed Him

Struck on Head, Hurled to Road, He Relates.

Beaten, robbed and thrown from a speeding car, David Martin, 27, of Indian Springs, Md., was found unconscious near Memorial Circle on the Mount Vernon boulevard early yesterday.

He was picked up by a motorist and taken to Emergency Hospital. He told Park Police that three men in a large, black sedan, robbed him of $14, struck him on the head and threw him from the machine.

Martin said he met the men "somewhere in downtown Washington." It was suggested they take a ride. As they drove along the highway, Martin declared, one of the men struck him and rifled his pockets. He was thrown from the car while it was traveling fast, he said.

Reserve Board Aid Will Face Bank Probers

Stevens to Be Asked About Steps to Save Detroit Company.

(Associated Press.)

Before the Senate Banking Committee concludes its exhaustive inquiry into the Detroit banking collapse, it is going to hear first hand a detailed description of the historic night of February 13, 1933, when a State-wide banking holiday in Michigan was declared by proclamation.

The story already has been told in part, but Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, has disclosed it was for the purpose of obtaining a more complete picture that Eugene W. Stevens, of the Federal Reserve board in Chicago, has been summoned.

Stevens is expected to tell a story of th eweek-end of sleepless nights immediately preceding February 13 when frantic efforts were made to find a way out of the desperate situation.

The reserve board official was not subpoenaed until late in the inquiry into the affairs of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., the first of the two Detroit holding companies to come under the scrutiny of the Senate.

It was while witnesses were being questioned by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, about that crucial night in Detroit when Senator Couzens asked for Stevens' subpoena. He said he wanted to hear the story from him because of the position he occupied.

The committee has given no indication that it intends to call Gov. William A. Comstock, who issued the holiday decree.

Interest in the hearing has been revived recently by the more prominent part taken by representatives of the Department of Justice.

Unidentified Man Injured by Auto

Victim Suffers Fractured Skull; Driver Held.

An unidentified white man, about 45 years old was struck by an automobile at Rhode Island avenue and Fourteenth street northwest at 7:30 o'clock last night.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where his condition was said to be serious. He received a fractured skull and still was unconscious last night. Fred L. Allen, 28, of 212 C street northwest, driver of the car, was being held at the Second Precinct pending outcome of the man's injury.

The man was described as dark-haired, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighing about 175 pounds, and wearing a dark suit with a pin-stripe and a gray overcoat.

'Yes Man' Congress Ridiculed by Reno

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—The present United States Congress is composed of yes-men, Mil Reno, charged in an address here today.

Reno, the militant Iowa leader who led several wide-spread farm strikes, called on Congress to "assume the duties for which it was created or adjourn forthwith."

His attack was launched against what he called the congressional policy of "surrendering constitutional powers to any indiviuual or corporation." He said that the NRA, CCC and the proposed pure food and drug code were all workings of a dictatorship which had been allowed to develop because Congress refused to assert its rights.

District Leaders To Honor Simon

Speakers Announced for Testimonial Dinner.

Washington leaders, lay and cleric, will honor Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Eighth Street Temple, at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel February 7.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington; the Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, rector of Catholic University; Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital; former Justice Wendell Phillips Stafford, of the District Supreme Court, and the Rev. William Rosenau, of Baltimore, will speak.

Dr. Rosenau inducted Dr. Simon into the ministry at Eighth Street Temple almost a third of a century ago.

The dinner will commemorate Dr. Simon's 30 years of service with his Washington congregation. Reservations may be made with Sydney Selinger, 818 F street.

Woman Doctor on Trial In "Highball" Slaying

Greenwood, Miss., Jan. 28 (AP).—The State will demand a murder verdict when Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, pretty Greenwood physician, goes on trial here tomorrow in the strange "whisky highball" death of Dr. John Preston Kennedy, her one-time medical associate.

District Attorney Arthur Jordan announced this today on the eve of the trial that has set this delta city and the surrounding country agog with excitement and wonder.

Wholesale Whisky Prices Cut; Huge Middleman Profit Bared

weeks ago, and those to be posted today, under the code:

Blend, per case.	Dec. 17	Jan. 29
Spring Garden	$32.40	$27.54
Green River	31.50	26.77
Red Top	27.90	23.71
Mellwood	27.00	22.95
Shenandoah	18.45	15.68

Digressing a moment, it is enlightening to note that "cut-price" liquor stores across the District border in Maryland—even after allowing their customers 10 per cent off on case lots—are asking $32.40 a case for Shenandoah whisky, a neat profit of over 100 per cent for some one somewhere between producer and consumer.

200 Per Cent on One Brand!

In one instance a price rise is noted. The Continental Distilling Co. has boosted the price of Snug Harbor whisky from $9.00 to $11.00 a case. (The "cut-rate" boys over in Colmar Manor were getting $27 a case for this brand, and probably will want more now that the distillers' price has gone up!)

Frankfort Distilleries, Inc., have reduced their prices less than some of the others, posting a list showing cuts ranging from $1 to $2 a case.

At the time when a tentative distillers' price list was furnished Joseph H. Choate, director of the FACA, last December, Dr. Doran explained it was desirable to withhold straight old whiskies from the market. These, he said, would be snapped up immediately by wealthy persons and speculators and were needed for blending purposes.

Since that time, a grave shortage of bonded whisky has been revealed by the Treasury Department.

The prices made public yesterday, however, include such old favorites as Cascade, in de luxe pints, 18 summers old, 100 proof, posted at the top of W. L. Weller & Sons' bottled-in-bond whiskies at $62.20 a case; Old Fitzgerald, in pints or quarts, at $60.20 a case, and Cabin Still, 17 years of age, at $59.20.

Grape and Peach.

Weller & Sons also have some pints of grape and peach brandy, 12 years old, at $50.20 and $45.20 a case, respectively.

For Cascade which is only four years old the price is $51.20 a case, while Old Fitzgerald of this age brings up the bottom of the list at $50.20. All these whiskies and brandies are 100 proof and bottled in bond.

The American Medicinal Spirits Co. has a wide variety of bottled in bond whiskies on which Federal and Kentucky taxes have been paid, the stock price for bourbons being $56.90 a case, and for ryes, $60.40. Some of the former favorites are Cedar Brook, Old Crow, Old Grand Dad, Green River (not to be confused with the cheap blended variety on sale in Maryland), Mayfield, Special Old Reserve, Sunny Brook, Old Taylor, Bourbon de luxe, Old Rosebud, Coon Hollow, Cedar Run, and Pebble-Ford. Among the ryes are Mount Vernon, Susquehanna, Old Puritan, Cumberland and Farmdale. One brand of 100-proof bourbon, Black Gold, is priced at $60.40.

Among the lower priced bourbons, spring of 1933, 93 proof, bottled out of bond, are Crab Orchard, Old Prentice and Willow Springs, at $18.90 a case. Maryland retailers have boosted this price to $27 to the consumer.

Seagram's Prices Listed.

The James E. Pepper Co., the Old Quaker Co., the Joseph S. Finch Co. and the George T. Stagg Co. have posted a wholesaler's price list for whiskies—of which the names alone vary—ranging from $24.89 a case for the best, to $15.33 for the cheapest. These whiskies, which are not bottled in bond, range from 92 to 100 proof.

Seagram's American Type Rye	$39.50
Lincoln Inn	39.50
Silver Dollar	39.50
Pedigree Deluxe	46.50
Seagram's Bourbon	37.50
Double Eagle	37.50
Ancient Bottle	39.50
Seagram's "No. 83" (90 pf)	36.00
Seagram's "V. O." (90 pf	38.50

The 100 proof bourbons run consistently $2 a case less than the ryes on this company's list.

Among the straight, 100 proof whiskies available is Anchorage, put out by the Glenmore Distilleries Co., at $14.75 a case.

Of all the whiskies now sold under the code, the Continental Distilling Corporation's Sweepstakes and Sagamore blends are the most modestly priced—at $8.50 a case.

Mrs. Bergmann Dies; Resident Here 56 Years

Funeral to Be Held Today for Widow of Building Association Head.

Mrs. Ida Louise Bergmann, 77, widow of Henry H. Bergmann, former president of the Washington Permanent Building Association, died Saturday night at her home, 3526 Thirteenth street northwest. For more than half a century she had been widely known here, especially among the German-Americans who settled here in Civil War days and took part in artistic and musical developments.

She was born in Hanover, Germany. When a girl she met Mr. Bergmann, who had been sent to Germany to finish his education. His father was Karl W. Bergmann, Washington piano teacher. Immediately after her twenty-first birthday she left Hanover for Washington, where she and Mr. Bergmann were married.

At that time, Mr. Bergmann was helping organize the German-American Fire Insurance Co., now the American Fire Insurance Co., of which he became secretary, and the Washington Permanent Building Association, of which he became treasurer and president. He remained the executive head of both institutions until his death three and a half years ago.

Mrs. Bergmann's wide social activities had narrowed until at the time of her death she belonged only to a group of former members of the disbanded People's Church and to the Universalist National Memorial Church.

She is survived by two sisters, Miss Mary Elizabeth Meyer, of Washington, and Frau Emilie Niemeyer, of Hanover, Germany; by two daughters, Mrs. Dora Waldecker, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Howard E. Greene, of Washington, and two sons, Hermann H. Bergmann, of Washington, and Melvin F. Bergmann, of Silver Spring, Md.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, pastor of her church, will conduct the funeral service, to be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Lee's funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast. Burial will be in the family plot at Prospect Hill Cemetery.

ing his prestige is not involved because he regards debt payment as a "sacred cause."

The long-demanded "public safety" coalition cabinet was regarded as still remote, since Left leaders were represented as not convinced that the situation was serious enough to make such a step necessary.

The uncontrolliable anger of the French people, aroused over the Bayonne Bank scandal, in which the late Serge Stavisky mulcted the public of some $40,000,000 and involving cabinet members and high government functionaries, made last night's riots at the Palace de l'Opera the most devastating experienced in the present crisis.

The Royalists, composed largely of students, led the disorders, but were joined by crowds of citizenry.

Charges were filed against 21 of the scores of persons arrested. Seventy-two police were injured in the rioting, three of them seriously. Hundreds of rioters were hurt and one American newspaperman, caught in the rush, was beaten by police.

Contractors To Talk Codes In Session Here

Hopkins, Ickes to Address Fifteenth Annual Convention.

With general contractors and other construction men from all parts of the country in attendance, the fifteenth annual convention of the Associated General Contractors of America convenes today for a three-day session at the Willard Hotel.

Among the outstanding speakers at today's session are Harry L. Hopkins, Civil Works administrator, who will discuss in detail the CWA pogram, and Rollad J. Hamilton, of New York, president of the American Radiator Co. Stephen F. Voorhees, chairman of the code committee of the Construction League of the United States, will make a report on the master code of fair competition for the construction industry, which is expected to be approved by President Roosevelt.

The sessions will be opened with an invocation by Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, followed by a special memorial service for the late Warren A. Bechtel, past president of the association.

An analytical discussion of all N. R. A codes pertaining to construction, including the lumber and building supply dealers' code and the proposed real estate brokers' code will be made at tonight's session by Burt L. Knowles, president of the E. D. Ward Co., Worcester, Mass. The proposed code of fair competition for the general contracting industry will be discussed by A. C. Tozzer, of New York, president of the association.

At tomorrow's session Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, will discuss the Nation's highway construction program. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, and Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will address Wednesday's session. The convention will close with a banquet Wednesday evening at which Congressional and administrative leaders will be in attendance, and which will be addressed by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Public Works Administrator.

Bremer Kidnap Clew Fizzles

Ransom Payment Report Proves False; Police Held in Check.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 28 (AP).—Twin City police today held in check enforcement officers, to enable kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer to communicate with his family after investigating a seemingly false report the $200,000 ransom was paid.

The check on police activities was loosened for a time last night, when Hennepin County deputy sheriffs, in Minneapolis, and a few St. Paul police sped to the outskirts of Minneapolis to investigate the story of two men from Montana. They told of seeing a mud-spattered sedan, a large bulky white sack and a small coupe, which they believed had picked up the ransom money near a bridge over the Minnesota River.

The Bremer family, still hopeful the abductors of the 37-year-old president of the Commercial State Bank would communicate with them, insisted the ransom money had not been paid. Hennepin County sheriff's office likewise said its inquiry had not shown any indication that the ransom had passed last night.

Virginia Liquor Control Bill Blocks Budget

Peery Taxation Boost Plan Also Awaits Bill Passage.

Richmond, Jan. 28 (AP).—Members of the General Assembly tonight were giving thought to the $82,119,548 biennial budget bill, which is being held in the background, pending action on the liquor control bill and the administration's $1,000,000 tax increase program.

Senator W. A. Garrett, chairman of the Senate finance committee, tonight said the tax increase bill sponsored by Gov. Peery will come before his committee Tuesday. Meanwhile, he plans a conference with Delegate Ashton Dovell, chairman of the House appropriations committee.

The liquor control bill, establishlishing a State monopoly liquor dispensary system, has been set for a special and continuing order on the House calendar Tuesday.

Assembly leaders said little has been done on the budget bill, since anticipated revenue from liquor and such new revenue as may be available under the Peery tax increase program must be considered.

Hearings Are Planned.

Senator Garrett said it is likely that a series of public hearings may be necessary on both the tax bill, which embodies provisions for raising the levies on 10 items, including income, merchants, dividends, utilities, inheritances and theaters, and on the budget bill.

The Senate finance chairman said if hearings are deemed necessary on the tax program he will arrange for them with Chairman Dovell Tuesday.

The Senate, which already has the tax program before it, will meet at noon tomorrow, and the House will convene tomorrow night.

The Peery tax bill will be introduced by Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the House finance committee.

Before the Assembly is the liquor problem, taxes and schools, and redistricting. Public hearings have been set this week on billboards, seafood and blue laws. The passenger automobile license reduction bill probably will be reported during the week.

Members of the Assembly are known to have given much study to the budget bill. Some have advanced the idea of paring down appropriations, in hope of escaping increased taxation.

Consolidations Scanned.

The study has been connected with the recommendation of the Senate Economy Committee for the authorization of the Chief Executive to abolish or consolidate various departments and equalization of salaries.

This bill has been reported from committee and will be on the Senate calendar tomorrow.

The Holt Congressional redistricting bill will probably be back on the floor of the Senate late this week. It was hurled back into the lap of the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee last week, after reaching vote on passage. A storm of protest broke and opponents forced revision. Reports today were that most of the controversial spots had been erased.

Bowie Volunteer Auxiliary Elects

Mrs. Marian Joffe Heads Fire Department Unit.

Mrs. Marian Joffe has been elected president of the new ladies' auxiliary of the Bowie (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department.

Other officers include Mrs. Florence Kline, vice president; Miss Mary Fladung, secretary, and Miss Mary Baumann, treasurer.

They were installed by Mrs. Mary Fainter, of Hyattsville, president of the State Ladies Auxiliary. She was assisted by Mrs. Merryman, president of the Prince Georges County Auxiliary, and Mrs. Mary Baker, vice president of the county unit.

Charter members of the organization include Mrs. George Lancaster, Mrs. J. E. Wildman, Mrs. William Hardy, Mrs. A. A. Horwitz, Mrs. J. Guy Bell, Miss Patsy Vermillion, Miss Nancy Hardy, Miss Agnes Fladung, Miss Thelma Brown, Miss Helen McLane and Miss Jane Seitz.

Virginia Towns Cut Pay Rolls On CWA Jobs

Part of National Move to Check on Local Projects.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Elimination from Civil Works reemployment rolls of persons who have not resided in Fredericksburg for at least one year has been accompanied by a scrutiny of the needs of those holding jobs under the reemployment program.

Levin J. Houston, jr., local CWA administrator, yesterday discharged a plumber who has lived in this city for only three months.

Mr. Houston also is checking reports that persons living outside the city limits are employed on local Civil Works projects.

Improvements are near completion at the elementary school. Next week work will begin on the high school.

CWA Pay Roll Cut.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Although the number of CWA workers in Loudoun County last week had not decreased the wages were cut in half. A total of $3,777.27 was paid out yesterday as against $6,220.68. The cut is due to the recent orders reducing the weekly schedule to 15 hours.

Work is progressing slowly. Two days weekly is the limit on some projects. On others the work is apportioned on a 15-hour weekly limit.

Staunton Shows Slash.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The pay roll in the Fifth (Valley) district of the Virginia SWA set-up last week showed 797 fewer persons employed than the previous week with the pay roll approximately $11,000 less.

During the week ended January 20 there were 4,895 persons on the CWA work lists, and they drew approximately $71,000, the high point in the district.

The Augusta County pay roll was $7,192.58; in Staunton, $5,738.92.

Women workers are operating a sewing room, acting as assistants in the public library, nursing at the Western State Hospital, doing clerical work in the public health nursing survey, and doing extra cleaning in the public schools.

Bristol Seeks Loan.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—A Bristol, Tenn., request for a $51,000 public works loan for water main extensions has been forwarded to Washington for approval, Street Commissioner Arthur Green said today.

The request, among others, was forwarded by the Tennessee public works advisory board, from Nashville.

The loan is sought to improve the service to water consumers in various parts of the city, particularly in the West End and Fairmont sections where, at times of low pressure, service has heretofore been inadequate.

Page Equalization Board Is Appointed

Luray, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Judge H. W. Bertram, of the Page County court, has appointed as equalization board to pass on assessments of real estate O. O. Baker, H. H. Hudson, J. G. Grove, B. T. Milton and C. D. Price.

The board will seek to harmonize assessments made by Commissioner of the Revenue Charles N. Graves.

Fire Hazards Slashed, Trails Rebuilt by CCC Work in Luray

1,000 Miles of Roadside Cleared, Phone Lines Erected, 10,000 Acres Cleared, Plant Disease Fought on Large Areas by Five Camps.

Luray, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—A summary of a part of the work done by the five C. C. C. camps in the Luray area—Skyland, Big Meadows, Beech Spring, Roosevelt and Bald Face Knob—shows that fire hazards have been removed on about 7,000 acres of land, in addition to the construction of 80 miles of truck and automobile trails.

Slightly more than 60 miles of telephone lines have been built; fire breaks have been erected over 10,000 acres of land, and more than 1,000 miles of roadsides have been cleared four look-out houses have been erected from which surrounding mountain territory can be scanned.

Tree and plant disease control operations have covered 300 acres at Skyland, 1,000 acres in territory contiguous to Big Meadows camp and along the headwaters of the Rapidan River, 200 acres in the territory adjacent to Beech Spring camp, 400 acres near Roosevelt camp and 600 acres on top of the Blue Ridge in the Bald Face Knob section. Erosion control has been effected for approximately six miles in all directions from the five camps and many erosion control dams have been built near all the camps. The revegetation work has been extensive around all the camps.

Dr. George H. Long, Luray physician, began a serier of first aid lectures to members of the local fire department and enrolled men from C. C. C. camps in Payne County.

The lectures well attended, deal with first aid treatment in cases of accident to members of the Luray Fire Department and the C. C. C. campers. Dr. Long is a member of the Luray town council.

Virginia CWA Man Answers Paper's Attack

Facts Lacking, He Replies to Failure Charge in Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—A recent editorial in the Daily Progress here, which charged President Roosevelt has virtually admitted the failure of the CWA, has drawn the sharp fire of Frank E. Hartman, local district CWA administrator.

In a letter to the editor declaring the editorial "was unfair and unjust," Hartman said "I can not stand silently by and see the CWA unjustly criticized."

The editorial had said that "if it (the CWA) goes out of existence and becomes a monument to the failure of one of the Administration's hugest experiments, it may be said with unalloyed truthfulness that the great recovery program was wrecked upon the same shoals and breakers which have caused the destruction of so many American public institutions—political graft and corruption."

Hartman accused the editor of lacking "proper knowledge of the facts" and declared he and all his assistants were selected on nonpolitical basis and that he, Hartman, served without pay.

Another passage in the Daily Progress editorial to which Hartman objects, reads:

"The CWA was not designed as a permanent measure. Its purpose was to provide work (more or less synthetic) for those who could find no jobs in the regular channels of employment. It was something to tide over the unemployed. We must wonder now if it has become a machine which has gone beyond the power of those who constructed it—wild and uncontrolled."

Another section of the editorial, dealing with charges aired in other sections of the country pertaining to graft, drew this comment from Hartman:

"If there has been a single case of graft or unscrupulous business methods, as referred to in the editorial, followed in our district, we request and will appreciate information that will disclose it."

Hartman, who alleges that the editor of the Daily Progress will not print his reply, concluded his statement with the declaration that he is mailing copies of the editorial and his reply to President Roosevelt, Harry Hopkins, Federal CWA administrator; State Director William A. Smith, Gov. Peery, Senator Byrd and other officials.

Financial Gain Made in 1933 By Woodstock

Cash Balance Boosted $300; Treasurer's Report Shows.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The municipality of Woodstock paid all bills during 1933 and increased its cash position approximately $300, the report of B. E. Clowser, treasurer, for the year ended December 31, made to the town council reveals.

The town began 1933 with a balance of $1,080.81, while on December 31 the net cash position was $1,362.78.

Recepits for all sources during 1933 totaled $25,070.79. The major portion of the receipts came from water and general taxes, while special assessments, such as tax penalties, business licenses, &c., accounted for the balance.

Disbursements totaled $23,708.01. General expenses were $18,080.60, while streets and sidewalks claimed $4,486.94 and the water and sewer department, $1,140.47.

The balance sheet shows assets of $219,242.20, liabilities of $2,360.11 and a bonded debt, due in 1955-1956, of $176,000.

P. F. Peer, K. K. Koontz and T. H. Fravel, members of the finance committee of the town council, have examined the treasurer's report.

Danville Fire Loss Low.

Danville, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The report of Fire Chief Lewis F. Mitchell, filed with the National Bureau of Fire Underwriters, shows an unusually low fire loss in Danville in 1933.

The total was $29,618.60, with an insurance coverage of $27,637.60. The per capita loss was $1.08, a decrease of 6 cents under last year.

Firemen answered 192 alarms, of which 8 were false.

Lynchburg Tax Low.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Adjusted tax rates in Lynchburg for 1933 was the lowest, with the exception of Norristown, Pa., in 284 cities included in a survey by C. G. Rightor.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Charging her escort, Fred Hammond, of Hagerstown, had stolen $8 from her pocketbook while they were eating in a local lunch room yesterday, Miss Gwendolyn Smith, Westminster, sought the aid of town officers, who placed the youth under arrest.

Hammond, an employe of a local shoe factory, admitted his guilt before Magistrate George E. Benson and was committed to jail in default of a $50 fine.

Collegians Praise Leader Who Quit

Results of Administration Lauded in Paper.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Results of the administration of Dr. Charles W. Henry, recently resigned president of King College, were described as "highly desirable" in an editorial in The Kaysecan, college paper.

The students paper is edited by William Mansell, a junior, from Camden, Miss. After reciting incidents of Dr. Henry's administration, the editorial concluded:

"Some of these reforms have been met with criticism; most of them have been welcome. Regardless of local attitude, it remains to be said that the results of Dr. Henry's administration are, as a whole, highly desirable, and are a continuance of the high scholastic and Christian ideals established by former President Tilden Scherer and his predecessors."

Roanoke May Drop Teacher Insurance

Policy to Pay Absentees Has Expired.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The Roanoke school board is making a study of the advisability of discontinuing a health and disability policy which costs the city 2.42 per cent of the schools' payroll and designed to cover 80 per cent of absent teachers' salaries. The policy expired January 25.

J. S. McDonald, clerk of the board, is tabulating figures under the policy since it was instituted on July 1, 1932, and they will be submitted to the board in February.

The board recently revised the curriculum for the public schools, eliminating several courses and curtailing the teaching staff in order to come within a budget of $500,000 for the year.

South America To Be Subject In Post Series

Cameron Rogers to Speak Tomorrow Night at Masonic Temple.

"Republics in the Clouds," the South American countries of Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, will be the subject of the eleventh in a series of 20 illustrated travel talks presented under auspices of The Washington Post at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue, at Thirteenth street, tomorrow at 8:15 p. m.

Cameron Rogers, noted author, traveler and lecturer, will be the speaker and his description of amazing contrasts encountered in the diversified terrain of these three countries will be supplemented with motion pictures and stereopticon views in color.

Mr. Rogers will need no introduction to thousands of lovers of literature and his travels and investigations in South America particularly qualify him to discuss the subject. South America is comparatively unknown to the tourists of beaten paths, but, to the few who are imbued with the love of adventure and who desire new and picturesque scenes together with the mementos of long-ago history, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia offer delightful opportunities which will be interpreted at The Post lecture tomorrow night.

A nominal admittance charge of 25c is made for each individual lecture in The Post series and tickets for the illustrated talk on Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia will be on sale at the Masonic Auditorium box office beginning at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Mr. Rogers' talk will start promptly at 8:15 p. m. and will be accompanied by other interesting features.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For)

SHALL the Government employe drive his own car to work like employes in private occupations, or shall he walk to work, or be a strap-hanger on a public conveyance?

BAKER.

This question is asked by Dennis E. McQueary, Veterans Administration, who is leading a wide movement for parking facilities for Federal employes. Mr. McQueary is president of the Association for Adequate Parking and Recreation Facilities Among Government Employes.

"At least 65 per cent of the Federal personnel lives beyond walking distance of their work, because the business section has pushed the residential area further out," Mr. McQueary points out. "The congested area has been extended so far from the Government offices that a Federal employe driving to work, has to park his car almost a mile away, or else violate the law and get a 'ticket.'

"The big stores in the large cities are providing parking space for their clerks and customers. Why shouldn't the Government provide parking lots or garages for the employes? The Government owns vast areas of ground adjoining nearly every Federal building in Washington. But this had not been done to any substantial degree. The $17,000,000 Commerce Building was constructed so as to give division chiefs parking space, but the rank and file of employes were not so favored. They must run the risk of paying fines in Police Court or hang on a strap in a public conveyance. And Washington has no rapid transit system."

All Federal and District employes are urged to join the association by Mr. McQueary, who hopes it will reach such proportions that Congress will recognize the problem and attend to its solution.

Applications for membership in the association can be filed with Mrs. Lucia M. McQueary, secretary-treasurer, 3842 Windom place northwest. Applications also can be filed through the Federal Diary.

A radiant energy detector for resistance photo electric cells has been invented by William Sackville (*), Navy. It consists of a multiple cell specially grouped in combinations or intersecting base lines so as to afford respectively by their responces lateral and vertical impressions. These impressions of direction are in azimuth and elevation when used in apparatus for detecting the presence of an invisible substance.

May There Be Light.

Because these days so oft are dreary—
The winter's clouds hang dark and low
And dispositions grow quite weary,
From colds or sickness, fogs and snow.

It seems just cause that each one stifle
That impulse to find fault, to fuss,
Or of permitting some mere trifle
Almost to get the best of us.

Now of all seasons should be heeded
The golden rule in what we say;
Right now is when the sunshine's needed
To drive the gloom and clouds away.

Agriculture.

Radio Waves and Ripples

AS far as Aunt Sadie is concerned, Artur Rodzinski's proposing an annual tax of $1 on every radio set, to be disbursed by a Federal Department of Fine Arts for the maintenance of symphony orchestras and opera companies, is merely an excuse for setting up another Government department.

Aunt Sadie's no friend of Government departments, particularly at this time of the year when income tax payments are due.

Mr. Rodzinski, conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, says his plan would raise $18,000,000, which would cover the $150,000 a year deficits of the major orchestras "and leave plenty for the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies, drama, art and the well-worth-while entertainments of a civilized nation."

"And before you knew it," remarked Aunt Sadie as she settled herself in her chair to listen to the Crime Club, "Mr. Rodzinski's Department of Fine Arts would be asking Congress for an annual appropriation of a quarter of a billion dollars."

Aunt Sadie probably is as civilized as anyone and would gladly send Mr. Rodzinski as much as $5 a year whether she heard any of his broadcasts or not. She's simply not quite herself during the season for making out income tax returns.

Broadcasting throughout the night, WJSV has learned, uncovers a lot of heterogeneous and perfectly useless information about life and people.

It uncovered last week, for instance, Walter Winchell, one of your favorite columnists probably, as a D-Xer, one of that small coterie of radio listeners who stay up half the night dialing for far-away stations.

Winchell wired Arthur Godfrey characteristically:

"Why don't you marry the girl. People are beginning to talk. Am covering the air romance in my column in Mirror Monday. Naughty man • • •"

Godfrey had been carrying on a radio flirtation with a girl in New York named Helen France, and Winchell, of course, heard all.

And another thing, WJSV found out that there is a girl in Toledo, Ohio, named Agnes Slinglof.

J. Raymond Baine, a tenor in Estelle Wentworth's radio opera company, by virtue of a recent audition, sings this midnight with George Olsen and his band broadcasting from New York's Pennsylvania Hotel through WMAL.

The Radio Forum goes back to Monday nights this week after a season of Wednesday night broadcasting. The time is the same, 10:30, and tonight's speaker is Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, on "Lobbying and Its Baneful Influence On Government."

Leopold Stokowski will keep his hand in Philadelphia Orchestra broadcasting while he is in Hollywood next month for study and research in the movie colony by daily telegraphic comment on each program. Sylvan Levin will be in charge of the orchestra's nightly programs on C. B. S., and noted guest conductors will take over the organization during subscription concerts in the Academy of Music at Philadelphia.

To meet daytime communication needs and to aid in the coordination of evening instruction courses, Civilian Conservation Corps camps in Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania are to be linked to headquarters for the Army's Third Corps Area in Baltimore by an amateur radio network.

Thirty stations are to be equipped for radio operation in the proposed nets which the Signal Corps estimate will save the government $400 a month in phone and telegraph tolls. The stations will operate at 4305, 4445 and between 3750 and 3900 kilocycles for either voice or code. The cost of equipment and installation will average approximately $150 per station.

2 Key Witnesses To Accuse Touhy

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley, in charge of the State's kidnaping case against Roger Touhy and three associates, indicated today he would complete presentation of testimony by Tuesday.

Mrs. Clara Sczech, who, the prosecution maintains, was cook in the house where John Factor was kept prisoner, will head the parade of State witnesses when the hearing is resumed tomorrow, Crowley indicated.

Another key witness for the State is W. A. (Buck) Hendrichsen, alleged associate of the Touhys, who has turned State's evidence.

Guaranty Bank Backs Budget, Signals Danger

"Enormous" Outlay to Be Taken From Business, Review Points Out.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Guarantee Trust Co. finds the National budget recently submitted by the Administration to be "constructive," but the bank sounds a note of caution that the increased cost of the recovery program might defeat its own purpose if carried too far.

In its monthly review of business conditions, the bank says the President's budget message definitely fixed the cost of the recovery program as estimated by the Government, and "enormous as it is," there are many observers who feel that "if the major objectives of the Government's program can be attained at that price, the results will justify the cost."

Taxes Comes Out of Profits.

"It should be remembered, however," the bank points out, "that the money must be borrowed directly or indirectly from the earnings of business and that the taxes to pay off the indebtedness eventually must also come directly or indirectly out of business profits. Productive enterprise will have to bear heavy tax burdens for many years to come. These burdens, moreover, have been and will be increased by the various plans to redistribute income in the interests of the wage-earner, farmer, and other groups.

"These plans, while commendable in purpose, increase the financial burdens on business concerns; and they may, if carried too far, defeat their own ends by hindering, rather than promoting, recovery. Business recovery can come only from adequate business profits.

Points to Dangers.

The only way to increase the National income, the review states, is in the aggregate output of farms, factories and mines, which must be at a profit.

"Goods are, and must be produced for the sake of profit," the bank says, "and the current program, instead of making it easier for business concerns to earn profits, tends in some ways to make it more difficult. In this way, it runs the risk of lessening the incentive to business activity and of preventing an increase that might otherwise take place in the National income."

Stalin, Lenin's Widow End Rift

Krupskaya Lauds Dictator From Party Parley Platform.

Moscow, Jan. 28 (AP).—A rumored political coolness for several years between Joseph Stalin and the widow of Nikolai Lenin, the man he succeeded as leader of Soviet Russia, seemed to day to have disappeared, as evidenced by her participation in the all-union party congress.

The 64-year-old woman with a wrinkled, care-worn face and gray hair, known throughout Soviet Russia simply as Krupskaya, her maiden name, not only is sitting with Stalin on the presidium, or ruling body, of the congress now in session—an honor accorded to only a chosen few—but she has made a speech praising highly the conduct of the country's affairs.

"Lenin's policy is being successfully executed due to the brilliant leadership of Stalin," she said in concluding a speech which drew prolonged applause from delegates.

The widow and Stalin were reported to have disagreed over educational policies.

Navy Plan Flayed By Church Council

Protest Sent to Roosevelt on Building Program.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP). — The United States' projected program of naval expansion would, in the opinion of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, "seriously compromise" President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy toward other nations.

The executive committee of the council today forwarded to the President a strong protest against such a program, declaring it would tend to develop "in our own and other countries a state of mind that will make difficult a general reduction of armaments by international agreement."

"We believe," the declaration said, "that the Administration's naval construction policy seriously compromises all that is implied in a 'good neighbor' policy."

Presbyterian College Finances Are Improved

Philadelphia, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Presbyterian Board of Christian Education today said the Presbyterian College "Financial Picture" is much brighter now than it has been number of years.

The statement, dealing with the financial condition of 35 of the 45 colleges operated with the cooperation of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., says 19 institutions showed an operating surplus last year.

Socialists View War Spending With Alarm

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The National exevutive committee of the Solcialits party in a statement today said that "the single most alarming tend of the American Government is toward great armaments."

"Unless the people of America awake, before 1934 is over," the statement said, "we shall have gone far beyond the greatest military expenditures of our history except in the midst of actual war."

Young Chimpanzee Plays Nursemaid for Puppies

Josephine, a 3-year-old chimpanzee owned by E. C. Stamm, of the Maryland Club Gardens, plays nursemaid for two puppies also owned by Mr. Stamm. Josephine was purchased in Brussels when she was 10 months old and was left there until last October, when Mrs. Stamm made a trip to Europe and sent the animal to this country.

Church Beatifies Martyred Priests

Catholics Honor 3 Slain in South America.

Vatican City, Jan. 28 (AP).—Three Jesuit priests martyred by Nomad Indians of South America more than three centuries ago were beatified in St. Peter's today in a brilliant ceremony attended by hundreds of South American pilgrims.

The Jesuits raised to the rank of blessed were Fathers Rocco Gonzalez, Alfonso Rodriguez and Juan Del Castillo.

They were killed by unconverted Indians in 1628 after establishing several collective farming groups among wild tribes of a region then embracing portions of modern Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay and Brazil.

Fukien Revolt Closed With Rebel Surrender

Hong Kong, Jan. 28 (AP).—Government reports from Amoy today said the rebellion in Fukien Province had ended with the surrender of the Nineteenth route army.

Reorganization of the famous fighting body under national government auspices has begun, the reports stated, while leaders in the unsuccessful revolt allegedly secretly arrived in Hong Kong.

Man Shot Near Home.

George Murphy, colored, 31, of 609 N street northwest, told police he was shot by an unidentified assailiant early yesterday, while walking near his home. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a bullet wounded in the leg.

Ready readers await the offers in Post Classified Ads, the first thing in the morning.

Gen. Haskell Named Silk Code Director

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Appointment of Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell as executive director of the NRA code authority for the rayon and silk dyeing and printing industry was announced today.

Gen. Haskell, who recently served as chairman of the mayor's committee on relics in New York City, has obtained leave of absence from his command of the New York National Guard to assume his new duties. He will take office about February 1.

The rayon and silk industry includes 130 concerns concentrated in the New York City region. Most of the silk plants are in and around Paterson, N. J.

Coughlin Hails Mortal Blow To Depression

Passage of Monetary Bill by Senate Declared End of Doubt.

Detroit, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin said today the passage by the Senate of President Roosevelt's monetary bill made yesterday "the doomsday" of an era and "the birthday" of financial independence for the American people.

"Now," he said, "our most important public utility is no longer owned by a small group, but by the American people. Now the depression is behind us. Now it is possible to restore the 1926 price level and maintain it."

The address was broadcast over a special hookup of radio stations.

Four-Point Program.

Father Coughlin outlined the following four-fold program, which he said was vital if present gains be perpetuated:

1. "Purging" of the banking system.
2. Continuation of the Civil Works Administration and the Public Works Administration.
3. "Mature and complete development" of the National recovery act.
4. Remonetization of silver.

Regarding banking reform, he said "ational prosperity can no longer be entrusted to men responsible for acts revealed by the Pecora investigation." Banking based on "profit at any price" must cease, he said. Control of credit and currency by private groups of bankers must cease permanently, to purge "our banking system," he said.

Basis of Purchasing Power.

The CWA and PWA programs should be continued to produce purchasing power vital to National prosperity, he said. Continued feeding of Government credit into banks and industry have not, he said, helped the man "who couldn't buy a ham sandwich with all the bank credit in the world."

The National Recovery act has shown that Government can regulate business to the extent of dictating hours of employment, and wages, he said. This idea must be developed and perpetuated, he said, and "an honest wage must be assured."

Silver monetization, he said, is necessary to open up the Oriental markets. Defeat Saturday of Senator Wheeler's silver amendment to the monetary bill by a vote of 45 to 43 was described by the priest as "a forecast of the future course."

Golden Wedding Calls Out Aged Wine

Mr. and Mrs. Emile Garet, 2111 H street northwest, yesterday celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. The age of that bottle of wine they're examining is almost as great as their married life. Mr. Garet constructed the model of the Capitol Building now on exhibition there. It was made 30 years ago and has been shown at the Sesqui-Centennial, the St. Louis Exposition and the Exposition at Seville.

Scouts Report Gain Of 27,226 in 1933

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—A membership gain of 4 per cent—27,226 youths—in 1933 was reported today by the Boy Scouts of America.

Dr. James E. West, chief scout executive, said that at the start of 1934 there were 904,240 scouts enrolled. Included in the total were 34,065 cubs and 18,326 sea scouts.

"Kingfish" Resting On Way to Capital

Atlanta, Jan. 28 (AP).—Fresh from the political wars in new Orleans, Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana passed through Atlanta en route to Washington today.

The Senator, through the window of his stateroom, nodded a tousled head in greeting to curious spectators at the terminal station. Train attendants said he was resting in bed.

A young man seated outside the Senator's stateroom said he was Earle Christenberry, the Senator's secretary, and that there was no one else in the party.

"MOTHERS NEED HEALTHY NERVES, TOO, MISS WIGGINS—"

Miss Mary Wiggins, America's most daring Stunt Girl, says:

"I have to be sure my nerves are healthy to do my stunts, such as changing from speeding auto to plane, the high dive on fire into fire, and the high-altitude parachute jump. As to smoking, I've found that Camels don't interfere with healthy nerves. They are milder, better in flavor, and do not give me 'edgy' nerves even when I am smoking a lot."

Mrs. F. R. Bruce, Larchmont, N. Y. Mother, says:

"Healthy nerves are just as important in my daily life as they are to a thrilling stunt star. Policing up after children—watching their food, their sleep, their health—that's the job of being a mother. And one who is cross, easily irritated, always 'on edge' with nerves cannot create a happy home life.

"Smoking is one of my chief enjoyments. I smoke a lot of Camels, and I have found that the choice, more expensive tobaccos used in Camels never upset my nerves."

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Whatever your job or position in life, healthy nerves are worth any effort. Yet with many of us jangled, irritated nerves are only too well known!

Check up on your habits—your eating, your sleeping, your recreation, and your smoking. Countless people have turned to Camels and are enjoying a new freedom from jangled nerves. And they are urging their friends to join them!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand.

You'll like the taste...the remarkable mildness...of Camel's choice-quality tobaccos. And you can enjoy Camels steadily... hour after hour...without nervous irritation, or the aftertaste associated with the flat or "sweet" type of cigarette.

So change to mild, rich, good-tasting Camels. They never get on your nerves ...never tire your taste.

Legislative Sprinting.

Speaker Rainey and his colleagues are out for a new record. Already they have made a remarkable start by passing eight major bills in 19 legislative days. Some of these measures carry appropriations amounting to hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars. But since they originated in the White House, leaders in Congress feel no compunction in rushing them through with only superficial analysis.

"We are going to keep up our present rate of speed," says Speaker Rainey. He expects the House to be ready for adjournment by April 1. "When we get through with the necessary legislation," he confided to the Associated Press, "we are going to take three-day recesses and let the country know we have done our job." Of course, this last remark is a barb for the plodding Senate. The upper chamber is not quite so willing as the House to sign blank checks. Some obstinate senators insist upon trying to find out how these blank checks will be filled in after Congress has gone home.

At any rate, if Congress is guilty of exposing any hidden meanings in "recovery" measures it will not be the fault of the House. Members of that well-disciplined body may have the honor of telling their constituents when they return home that they have rubber-stamped more White House bills in less time than any other group of representatives elected by the American people. Even that enviable record established in 1932, when the House passed within 40 minutes the Hawes-Cutting bill giving the Philippine Islands independence, is expected to dwindle into insignificance in comparison with the current sprint toward adjournment.

Now that Speaker Rainey is out to set legislative sprinting records in a big way, the Senate is in danger of becoming the only obstacle to what Prof. Tugwell calls "old Anglo-Saxon democracy."

Perils Of The Antarctic.

Admiral Byrd's second Antarctic expedition is fighting against such formidable difficulties that he may find it impossible to remain at Little America during the coming winter. His men are divided into three groups; the work of unloading supplies has been halted, and the prospects of transporting to Little America the large quantities of food, gasoline, hay, &c., that are required for an over-winter stay in the Antarctic are becoming more tenuous every day. Some explorers fear that even Little America, which is built on the ice over 1,600 feet of water, may not be a safe haven this year.

A heavy ice pack usually protects the Bay of Wales from the rough waters of the open sea. But this year the pack has disappeared. Waves rolling in from the open sea made it difficult for the Jacob Ruppert to moor to the ice shelf. Moreover the great masses of ice in the bay, which have been accumulating ever since 1930, are now breaking up and floating out to sea. The entire front of the ice shelf is disintegrating. It is impossible for Byrd's ship to approach and continue unloading supplies. After a reconnoissance flight Admiral Byrd expressed fear that the entire flooring of the bay might go out.

Even under normal conditions the expedition would have encountered great difficulties in transporting its supplies to Little America this year. Between the edge of the ice and the winter base great pressure ridges have been thrown up by the jamming together of ice blocks over several seasons. To avoid these ridges and adjacent crevasses, opening to the water 40 feet below, it was necessary to follow a rather circuitous route to Little America.

To hasten unloading under these conditions—the Jacob Ruppert must leave on its return trip to New Zealand by February 10 to avoid being caught in the ice pack—a temporary cache for the supplies was established several miles up the bay. Since the Jacob Ruppert can no longer approach the disintegrating ice shelf, 43 men are marooned at this camp. The fact that four others were separated from this group aroused grave fears that the trail between the camp and Little America had been severed by a crevasse. If the ice continues to break up, it is not impossible that the section on which the 43 men and large quantities of supplies are marooned may be carried out to the sea.

It is quite evident, therefore, that the expedition faces a critical situation. Admiral Byrd is making a valiant fight against these tremendous odds. It is one of the most dramatic encounters between human ingenuity and the forces of nature in the history of modern exploration. The subtle treachery of the Antarctic has already frustrated the Lincoln Ellsworth expedition. Admiral Byrd may have better luck, but his present difficulties indicate that even experience, skill and careful organization are no guarantee against disaster in this wild and desolate region.

Reviving The Antitrust Laws.

A movement to reinstate the antitrust laws and give them full force is attracting considerable attention at the present time. Some critics of the NRA maintain that these laws must be restored in order to protect the small producer against the crushing competition of large business units, which, they allege, are favored under the industrial codes. Defenders of the NRA, on the other hand, maintain that without suspension of the antitrust laws, no effective control over business looking to recovery can be exercised.

Many of the supposed differences between advocates and enemies of the antitrust laws prove upon closer analysis to be more apparent than real. Thus Mr. Richberg believes suspension of the antitrust laws to be essential, but at the same time he emphasizes the necessity of enforcing codes of fair practice, forbidding monopolistic practices, and preventing price fixing that would constitute an undesirable restraint of trade.

If the antitrust laws had served the primary purpose of curbing unfair practices and had protected the public against monopolistic extortion, few people would advocate their modification or suppression. But experience has shown that they resulted in fostering many of the evils they were designed to prevent. Prohibitions upon reasonable agreements in restraint of trade among competitors encouraged the growth of monopoly. Court decisions, rigidly defining the limits of cooperative action designed to curb admittedly unfair trade practices, impaired the competitive system which the antitrust laws were meant to foster.

Therefore, instead of debating the merits of restoring a discredited system of legislation which failed both industry and the public, our legislators and administrative officials would do better to study proposals for permanent revision of the antitrust laws which would afford adequate safeguards against monopoly and at the same time permit industry to retain the benefits of cooperation under the NRA, which has brought relief to many competition-ridden industries.

Where The Danger Lies.

In the course of the Saturday debate on the gold bill, Senator Wheeler said "Let me predict that if we simply cut the gold content of the dollar and no more currency is issued and silver is not used for the purpose of increasing the amount of money in circulation, we will have a continuation of low commodity prices in this country." Senator Cutting also declared that the gold bill "would not add an iota" to purchasing power and was only a step in the right direction.

If these assertions are warranted, why has the gold reserve bill been characterized by its opponents as a dangerous proposal, likely to lead to an uncontrolled inflationary advance in prices? It is true that the measure does not provide for direct increases in the amount of money in general use. For the present at least the gold certificates which are to be issued to pay for the gold taken from the Federal Reserve Banks may not be put into circulation. They merely take the place of the gold reserves now held against Federal Reserve notes and deposits. However, a devaluation process which places a sum exceeding $2,000,000,000 at the disposal of the Treasury without forcing the Government either to tax its citizens or to borrow to obtain it, possesses a potential power to inflate the country's credit structure which is not generally understood by the public.

For example $2,000,000,000 of the prospective devaluation profits is to be used to establish a so-called stabilization fund against which the Secretary of the Treasury can draw whenever he wishes to carry on dealings in foreign exchange, buy Government bonds, or engage in any of the general banking operations permissible under the terms of the bill. As these disbursements are made, the sums paid out will return to the banks of the country in the form of deposits and will be added to the already abnormally large excess reserves of the member banks. The effect of increasing member bank reserves by such means is regarded by the foes of the gold reserve bill as in some respects the most revolutionary and certainly potentially the most dangerous feature of that measure.

It has been doubted whether the member banks would utilize funds thus poured into their coffers, since they already possess a vast mass of excess reserves which they have failed to employ. It has been said, too, that there is no especial difference between the existing excess reserves, created by open market purchases of Government securities by the Federal Reserve Banks, and the excess reserves which will result from Government disbursements of devaluation profits. There is, however, a vital difference which Federal Reserve authorities and an outstanding monetary expert, Dr. B. M. Anderson, emphasized when testifying before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. It was pointed out then that the excess reserves of the member banks, if created by open market buying operations, result in additions to Federal Reserve Bank holdings of Government securities. Consequently, the Reserve Banks are in a position to check an expansion of member bank credit should it become necessary to do so, by offering Government securities for sale and thus drawing down the excess balances of member banks.

The excess reserves created by the kind of Government operations permitted under the gold reserve bill, however, will not be subject to such control operations, since they will not be offset by security issues held by the Federal Reserve Banks. Potentially, the stabilization fund alone is capable of adding up to $2,000,000,000 to member bank excess reserves and the member banks might on the basis of existing reserve requirements expand their credit operations to 5 or 10 times that sum. The Federal Reserve Banks would have to look on helplessly should any such movement gain headway, since they would not be equipped with the resources for combating it.

In view of the large and mounting budgetary deficits which necessitate continued resort to Government borrowing, it must be admitted that the power of the Reserve Banks to reverse their open market operations and contract credit, even under existing conditions, seems more theoretical than real. Nevertheless, the possession of that power has helped to sustain confidence in our monetary and credit system, encouraging the belief that if a dangerously rapid expansion of credit should develop, the Federal Reserve authorities would act to curb it before it got entirely beyond control.

Unfortunately, passage of the gold reserve act of 1934 will deprive the Federal Reserve system of the power to exercise any effective restraint upon the credit policies of member banks. We can still hope that the banks will themselves appreciate the wisdom of caution and will not be persuaded or coerced into indulging in unsound expansion. But if these hopes should prove to be vain, there is no mechanism for disciplining them under the new dispensation.

Overthrowing The Cabinet.

When Alexandre Stavisky, the Polish crook who mulcted the French people out of hundreds of millions of francs, shot himself at Chamonix as the police closed in on him three weeks ago, he started a chain of events which may have most important implications for the whole world.

The fall of the Chautemps ministry itself was a political phenomenon, in that it was accomplished by public demonstration rather than by any of the constitutional methods. Chautemps had dismissed two of his cabinet ministers in an effort to stem the tide and twice had won votes of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies. Even Tardieu, leader of the Nationalists and an enemy of the Left, went to the defense of Chautemps and argued that the scandal was no justification for overthrowing him.

But Royalists and Communists, representing antitheses of political thought, organized demonstrations all over France. It was not the fact that the demonstrations were held that impressed the government so much; it was that the people joined them eagerly and indicated a general disgust of the government and parliament. Volatile Frenchmen made it clear that the deputies who voted confidence did not represent them.

Their disgust grew out of revelations that not only had Stavisky stolen 200,000,000 francs in the Bayonne pawnshop scandal, but that 1,200 papers relating to his case had unaccountably disappeared from the dossier in the Ministry of Justice. It was also revealed that he was seen at the races with a prefect when police of all France were supposed to be hunting him after his escape in 1926; also, that he financed the campaign of a member of the Chamber and that last year a provincial newspaper said that Stavisky and "Serge Alexandre," the name under which he had worked other swindles, were the same person.

The inflamed state of public opinion may make it impossible for any successor to Chautemps to survive long. The present Chamber is strongly leftist, with Socialists under Leon Blum and Radical Socialists under Herriot chief factors in a coalition government. It is not unlikely that even Herriot, strongest figure of his side, will be unable to handle the situation. It is conceded on all sides that it may be necessary to call general elections.

Seasoned observers believe that a general plebiscite might have grave consequences. For one thing, it would give those who have been demanding that the government be turned over to a "strong man" a chance to agitate their cause before the people in a campaign. Discontent over the budget and general distrust of parliament are reported to have started a strong drift toward Fascism. A clever campaign conceivably might strengthen the demand for the "strong hand." For another thing, an election might return the Nationalists to power, and with a Nationalist government, bring a reversal of policy toward Germany, disarmament, and other questions. An even stronger nationalism than that which now exists might be expected of a Right victory.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE AMERICAN public was warned against the old Spanish swindle, which had been used for generations to fleece the gullible.

REAR ADMIRAL CHARLES E. VREELAND, second in rank to Admiral Dewey, who was ill, told the House naval affairs committee that in the event of war, Japan could easily take the Philippines, but that America would hold Hawaii, the Canal Zone and Alaska without much trouble.

WELFARE SOCIETIES asked the President to hold up his signature on the Kenyon bill, abolishing the segregated district in Washington, until they could arrange to care for 300 or more girls who would be affected.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, in a speech said that it would never be possible again for Wall Street to influence the selection of a President. He said that Wall street must be watched, likening it to a boa constrictor. Scientists, he said, had learned antidotes for rattler poison, but they had not learned how to take the squeeze out of a boa.

A STORY from London said that the queen was saving money desperately, in fear of the approach of Socialism.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS ORLOFF, the latter a daughter of the czar's uncle, sailed for the United States to investigate the claim of a girl that she was Grand Duchess Olga, daughter of the czar, and had escaped death when Bolsheviks murdered the royal family at Tsarkoe-Selo.

THE HOUSE voted, 250 to 1, to appropriate $100,000 for the prosecution of the oil scandal cases. Democrats demanded that Secretary of the Navy Denby resign, because he had permitted the leases to be made.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

"Symmetalism."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I quote from your report today of Mr. Sprague's testimony before the Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee: "Restoration of the equilibrium rate," he explained, while committee members with furrowed brows, sought to follow him through a maze of involved financial advice. He said he thought some silver advisable as "an adequate metallic base."

The writer listened to his testimony, seldom knowing what he was talking about, since hardly an intelligent or constructive question was asked him by a member of the committee. When the meeting was over I said to Mr. Sprague: "I see that you and the Wall street interests now admit that there must be an adequate metallic base, gold and silver. But six months ago you and the gold standard interests referred to silver as an inflationary measure. Now you admit that silver must be used." "Yes," he replied in a very limited way, "it is a very complicated question."

To which I replied: "It is not a complicated question, rather it is a very simple question but you and the interests you represent have sought to confuse the public mind about the thing called money, the medium of exchange, and have partially succeeded." Then Mr. Sprague grinned and went his way to use a lot more cryptic language to fool some senator or representative.

How different from the testimony of Father Coughlin. He talked plain English so that any one could understand him. About silver, however, he used the word "symmetalism," apologizing, however, for it. "Symmetalism" means the joining together of two things. Since two means "bi," the two metals—gold and silver—should be referred to in connection with the currency, as it has been for the past centuries, as bimetalism. But bimetalism somehow is associated with Bryanism, the greatest of all his "isms" for the public welfare and those so-called experts admitting the fallacy of the fetish called gold monometalism, have now come over 100 per cent to bimetalism, but they would, to save their faces, have it called "symmetalism." "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

WILLIAM J. DWYER.

Horrors of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In these stricken times we are reminded of the horrors of war. The ostensible purpose of the Great War pictures, being featured in the newspapers, is to quicken the spirit of common interdependence and lay the harsh precepts of that antiquated sluggery before our forgetful minds.

I am a young fellow, still in my 'teens, and my memoirs of the World War are not fashioned as are those of you who enjoyed (?) more mature years. It is about time that agencies are getting to work, on a large scale, to overthrow the gaunt figure of death and hatred which symbolizes the most petty of international misunderstandings.

Now is the opportune time for Christian men and women through peace provocative measures to force themselves into dominance with doctrines of Christian fellowship and love, each man for all other men. The World Peace Poster's Conference sent a grand display of posters to Washington outlining at a glance some of the horrors of war. That was about two years ago. To those of us who observed them, they will never be forgotten. Those of us active in the spread of a world wide peace, rejoice at the support given the latest measures to secure that Utopian goal.

JOHN D. ARMSTRONG, Jr.

"Through Bogs and Quicksands."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Through Bogs and Quicksands," in this morning's Post is still another evidence of clear and intelligent thinking on the part of your editorial staff. Sixty years of observation has demonstrated that professional teachers are theorists, and also that "theories will not work," and here we have the entire Government run by professional thought.

Two lines in that editorial tell the dismal story: "Utilization of the abundant credit already lying dormant in the banks." Evidently official Washington does not understand the basic facts: Bankers are not lending money. And this hidden hoard is being added to day by day. Thirty days ago a friend endeavored to borrow $1,000 to build a garage and add two attic rooms to a home worth today $8,000, and clear of debt. Every available source of credit was traced, without result.

Two weeks ago I sought a third of this amount on local stock worth 600 per cent more than the proposed loan. The cashier said, "It is a good loan ordinarily, but now we are not making loans; we do not know what will happen; we must keep our assets fluid!" A heck of a chance for business to resume if the banks are hoarding all available cash! And the Administration wildly throwing "our" money to the four winds and the bankers just as wildly chasing the flying bills to add to their accumulation. J. B.

The Legion and the Bonus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the American Legion is not going to fight for the bonus payment, then it should disband. The V. F. W. organization fights hard for its veteran comrades. I sincerely hope that all World War and Spanish War veterans will, in the near future, belong to the V. F. W. The American Legion had better fight for the immediate payment of the bonus! LEONARD L. BEAVER.

"Let Us Have Peace."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In certain quarters it appears to be deemed smart and fashionable to indulge in cheap sneers at "pacifists." May I be allowed to remind such sneerers that our greatest generals have been self-declared pacifists?

Said Gen. Washington, "My first wish is to see that plague of mankind, war, banished from the earth."

To this Ulysses S. Grant added "Let us have peace!" "Nothing has ever been settled by war that could not have been as well settled without it; and, if after, why not before"? Said Sherman, "War is hell!" and I assume, the most ardent militarist would hardly confess that he really hopes to "raise hell" in this twentieth century.

Add to this testimony that of America's most modern general who personally has used his most modern phrases in forcibly dictating disarmament.

What better text could now be adopted world-wide by every people of every color in every country than "United we stand; divided we fall"?

Zangwill enumerated over 40 different occupations that make hard money out of war and preparation therefor.

What does humanity at large gain? Taxes, taxes and more taxes! Wholesale idiotic butchery of its finest youth! The sowing of seeds of future slaughter and the perpetuation of senseless inherited international jealousies and hates. If civilized humanity is to endure pacifism must be its life blood.

Board of Veteran Appeals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent appointment of former Gov. Pollard, of Virginia, to the chairmanship of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, and his reported announcement that the President authorizes members of that board "to use their hearts as well as their heads" in rendering decisions, is an interesting item of news for those of us who have had abundant opportunity in these last six months of noting the operations of these boards!

Mr. Pollard may know what he is talking about—but most of us who know the past activities despite kindly promises, may well cherish doubts—until "we are shown" by deeds!

LANCE WELFORD.

All Creatures Are Frantic When You Destroy Their Place of Refuge

By Robert Quillen.

In a time of great changes, when the security of old ways is threatened by some new heresy or idea or discovery, the atmosphere seems charged with uneasiness and unreality.

People quit planning and are carried along by the spirit of the times. They live only in the present moment. They lose respect for the old maxims. Usually they gamble. They indulge their appetites. "After us the deluge!" they cry. They are footloose and lost, without a guide or a destination.

That condition can not last, for it is contrary to nature.

Man is by nature a herd animal. Without a guide or purpose or spiritual anchorage, he is miserable.

He must belong to something and have an established way. He must have a place from which to depart and to which he can return. Alone on an island, he will establish a headquarters, if only a cleared space under a certain tree, he will go and come by the same path.

Spiritually lost in a time of uncertainty, he will be as frantic as a chick that has strayed too far from its mother's brood. And he will have no peace or sense of security until he finds something to which he can attach himself.

It may be no more than a slogan that seems to embody a principle, but it will be his anchorage. In it is the promise of safety and comradeship—the assurance that he belongs. Once more he is in the ranks, joyously cheering the captain, and going somewhere.

We have followed a chief and defended a place too long to be content as lone adventurers.

So it is that a time of change and loose ends finds us ready and eager to follow a leader.

He may be a man on horseback, bent on conquest and loot, or he may be an evangelist teaching peace on earth to men of good will.

In any case, he ends our doubts and uncertainties and delivers us from the hard business of thinking. We are anchored again; we have our teeth set in a comforting belief. Come what may, the boss will do the worrying. God's in His Heaven; all's right with the world.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

WHAT makes me think it will be a long time before the Republicans get a real live issue against the motley in power known as the Democrats is that the latter are so accommodating. They will give you anything you want — money, boards, even investigations.

Their good-heartedness, their graciousness in the matter of investigations is really something to talk about. Heretofore, we had to look to the opposition party for them. The party in power never investigated itself.

Now, however, the minority party has only to think of an investigation and the Democrats rush forward engagingly and insist: "Oh, we don't want to put you to that trouble, we will investigate ourselves."

• • • •

I think the underlying philosophy of this attitude of theirs is that if they give all of the service the country will sooner or later come to the conclusion that there is really no need of maintaining the Republicans. Why have two parties when one will give you anything in the world you want?

Now just to show how really accomodating this Administration is, Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell has come forward with another proposition. There has been a lot in the newspapers and from public speakers, you know, about the need of a strong and vigorous minority to check the crowd in power, to keep them from going to excesses, to hold them in the road.

Because of this need considerable protest has been made against the continued delegation of power to the President.

• • • •

Now isn't that something? In a speech he made in Cincinnati he does not advance his idea as an answer to the complaint. He simply recognizes the situation created by the transfer of so much authority to the executive branch and says that this has "to a measure, transferred to the administration the duties of a parliamentary opposition and has imposed on the personnel of the executive departments the obligations of debate with respect to detailed administration of the measures born of the conflict of forces and opinions in the Congress itself."

The professor appeared simply to be giving an explanation of the frequent squabbles in the administration. I am satisfied, though, that it is, by way of a proposition, an answer to the complaint that there is no aggressive minority challenging the Government as it moves on its hectic way.

• • • •

There is no need, in other words, of maintaining or encouraging a critical minority in Congress. The administration has its own minority among the personnel of the executive departments. For example, George Peek, lately of the AAA, wanted to move a certain way and the professor himself wanted to move another way. Naturally no movement resulted any way until the President ruled. There you have your perfect system, or so the professor apparently thinks, of checks and balances.

There are any number of instances of the functioning of the system, too. Crack-Down Johnson is frequently at odds with other department heads; he even had a tilt with Harry Hopkins, the relief man. Mr. Ickes has had his tilts. Even now he is against the NRA codifying the power industry, while the NRA is very determined to do it.

The picture the professor suggests puts the whole situation in a different light. What is more efficient, more conducive to the perfect working of the planned state than instead of the debate and bickerings in Congress we have the debate and bickerings of the personnel of the executive departments?

There is one flaw in this plan, though. We ought to have somebody to bicker and debate with Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Morgenthau when they get to fooling around with that $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Pilgrim's Progress.

A large number of important works in literature have been written in prison, because at different times in history prison walls have inclosed the best as well as the worst of men. In many cases the prisoners have enjoyed almost complete leisure, and have been supplied with writing materials. John Bunyan was put in prison during the reign of King Charles II, because he would not agree to stop preaching in his own way; but apart from confinement, he was not ill-treated and he had, fortunately, time to write Pilgrim's Progress, one of the master works of all time.

He did not profess to be a literary man, and had no ambition; his only wish was to save souls. He had, however, a bold pictorial imagination, the most passionate sincerity, and he was saturated in the noble English prose style of the Bible. Pilgrim's Progress appeared in 1678, became immediately popular, and has never suffered from neglect.

When I was a child my brother and I used to act the combat; he being Christian and I the Devil. My father said we were fitted by nature for our respective roles.

Rum Patronage Seekers Move Into Richmond

Legislators' Homes Are Swamped Also With Applicants.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 28.—With from 300 to 800 jobs expected to be created by liquor legislation, patronage seekers today converged on Richmond in hordes.

Unemployed lacking the wherewithal to visit the State capitol camped on the doorsteps of General Assembly members and unfolded their tales of woe when the legislators returned home for the week-end.

The beleaguered solons told all applicants they were powerless to help. They explained the jobs would be filled by the alcoholic beverage control board, all three members of which remain to be appointed by Gov. Peery.

Prices a Factor.

Several elements figured in the number of jobs to be made available through operation of the prospective State-controlled whisky dispensary system. Perhaps the most important factor will be the prices demanded by liquor distillers.

As now constituted, the Hall liquor bill would authorize the control board to manufacture whisky if deemed expedient. Should the State open its own distilleries, 300 or more employes would be needed in that end of the business alone. If private liquor interests offered their product at reasonable prices, however, the State probably would refrain from building plants.

Peery Has Troubles, Too.

In any event, several hundred persons are expected to be needed as managers and clerks of the dispensaries, depending on the number of stores established—a matter strictly within the discretion of the board.

The senators and delegates are not the only ones faced with patronage demands. Gov. Peery has been swamped with indorsements of scores of persons for the three $7,500 a year jobs on the liquor board. He has indicated the appointments would be withheld until after definite legislative action.

Progress probably will be made this week, as the Hall bill has been set for special order of business in the House Tuesday. Passage there would enable early Senate consideration.

WILLIAM EDGAR BORAH, Senator from Idaho: long labeled "the rogue elephant" in the Republican herd. A one-man party all by himself, the Babe Ruth of the Senate oratorical line-up, who, they say, often hits a home run, then fails to follow up by running the bases. Forensically formidable, he avoids committee work or other unspotlighted drudgeries. Refused to back T. R. in 1912. Successively supported Taft, Hughes, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, but his habit of party regularity is conspicuous only at election time.

Irreconcilable on the League and World Court, he promoted the 1921 disarmament conference, championed the antiwar pact. He crusaded for the noble experiment. He spurns tobacco, alcohol. Alone of 531 members of Congress, he refused to pocket the $2,500 added annual salary, which Congressmen voted themselves in the lush years.

Oratory and horseback riding are his major interests in life.

Movie Censor Battle Evokes Virginia Jibes

By J. K. Irving, Jr.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 28.—How a single misstep, particularly if it be political, can throw the whole machine into turmoil could hardly be better demonstrated than by the tempest which now rages over the Virginia Board of Motion Picture Censors.

This political body, which costs the State about $20,000 a year, today is one of the centers of controversy in Richmond, relinquishing little in the way of publicity and interest to the liquor bill, redistricting and the racing measure. It has no business with the Legislature save that members of the General Assembly must pass upon the budget, which contains its plea for an allowance of $47,160 for the ensuing biennium.

It all comes about because Attorney General Saunders exercised his legal prerogative—"appointed at the pleasure of attorney general"—removed Mrs. Emma Speed Sampson, of Richmond, a member of a dozen years' standing, replacing her with Mrs. John W. Chalkley, of Big Stone Gap. No charges were brought against Mrs. Sampson, but it is pointed out that her successor is the widow of a former member of the House of Delegates and that she resides in Gov. Peery's Congressional district, the Ninth.

Naturally such a shift greatly disturbed the long and happy somnolence of the State Board of Motion Picture Censors. The summary removal of Mrs. Sampson aroused fairly general indignation and gave rise to a question which is being bandied from lip to lip, "What good is the Board of Censors anyway?" Unless the unexpected happens, however, the only answers will be negative ones, but they will not come from sources wielding political power except here and there from a scattered minority which fruitlessly bucks the machine from time to time.

The only official announcement, so far, that sounds as though it might contain a threat comes from Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, of Loudoun County, who declares he will oppose inclusion in the budget of the requested appropriation. The board may point with pride to the fact that it has been living within its budget. For the year ended last June, expenditures from an appropriation of $22,595 amounted to $17,836.33. The appropriation for the present fiscal year is $21,420. Requests for 1935 and 1936, respectively, are $24,440 and $22,720, an increase over the present biennium of $4,320. Gov. Pollard, who on his recent retirement presented the tentative budget, suggested an appropriation of $22,190 for 1934-35 and $20,915 for 1935-36.

Capt. Kidd's Scarred Flintlock Resting in Maryland 'Arsenal'

Edmund A. Windolph, of Dawsonville, Md., has gathered together a collection of 200 guns from all corners of the world. Many are centuries old, and once belonged to famous characters in history. An old flintlock of Capt. Kidd is in his possession, and he is shown holding a case of gold-inlaid duelling pistols that belonged to the Royal Imperial family of Germany.

By Marion Butler.

Dawsonville, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—A trim, modern farmhouse, as grimly armed as any fortress of Indian days, stands just outside the quiet town of Dawsonville. Peaceful herds of Guernseys graze through its pastures and chickens scurry about the lawns—but 200 guns stand a stern watch within.

They hail from the far corners of the world and from the arsenals of long ago. But each is in order, ready for instant use. In one corner are old Spanish arquebuses; quaint German matchlocks in another. Capt. Kidd's own scarred flintlock rests on a shelf, ready for priming again. And the famous duelling pistols of Prussia's "Iron Chancellor" lie in a velvet case.

This collection of guns, considered one of the most unusual in the East, was gathered by a young Maryland farmer whose strange hobby began when he was a little boy playing with his first toy rifle. He is Edmund A. Windolph. A scholar in the history of weapons, he can read guns as the ordinary person reads a book.

Capt. Kidd's Flintlock.

Chief among Windolph's show pieces is the battered flintlock of the famous pirate, Capt. Kidd. Impressed by the collection of arms gathered by a mere youngster, a U. S. Army captain presented this to Windolph seven years ago. It is said to have been taken from Kidd at Boston harbor in 1699, upon his arrest for murder and piracy on the high seas.

Four matched sets of duelling pistols were hand-made more than a century ago, and are complete in every detail, from powder flasks, ramrods, &c., down to spoon-shaped lead ladles and conical molds for making one's own bullets.

"Curiously, I picked them all up in the space of six months back in 1929," Windolph relates.

Bidding against 100 collectors at an auction sale at Bonn, Germany, he secured the duelling pistols of the imperial family of the Princess Victoria. Marked with the crest of the Hohenzollerns, the pistols are inlaid in gold, with ebony handles, and luxuriously repose in a case of mahogany and mother of pearl, lined with red velvet.

"There is no doubt about this set having seen plenty of use," he points out with a smile. "When I got them, one gun was still loaded and the other had been fired."

Bats spread weird wings across the barrels of the set which he chanced upon while admiring a coat of armor in a Berlin antique shop. These pistols came from the palace of Bismarck, famous duelist and "Iron Chancellor," who made Germany one of the world's greatest military powers.

Concerning the ownership of his other two dueling sets, Windolph has theories. One which he bought from a private family in London is engraved with the seven-pointed crown of a royal family and bears the imperial proof marks of a crown over a "V." Windolph believes that it once belonged to a hot-tempered young noble of the seventeenth century.

One Set Never Used.

"At Stuttgart, Germany, I made a curious discovery," Windolph recalls figering the shining steel of his fourth set. "I bought a dueling set, made at least 150 years ago, but never used. See—here is even a corkscrew for extracting an unusual bullet when one of the duelists has been killed before firing."

Regarding his guns as old friends, Windolph has three that have been his special favorites from boyhood. A Spanish pistol shaped like a cannon, dated 1651; a gun with an embroidered sling that belonged to Lewis Gorges, one of the greatest game killers that ever lived, and a 200-year-old Kentucky rifle, almost as tall as man, made of cherry wood, silver chased, bought from a mountaineer.

Six foot two in height, nevertheless Windolph handles his guns with fingers as delicate and deft as a surgeon's. Skilled in gun mechanism, he overhauls each new acquisition and puts it in perfect working order. He is a fine shot and has been for years a member of the National Rifle Association.

Church Women Meet Today.

Robbery Case Hinges on Note Dropped at Jail

Writer Claims Wrong Man Held; Finger Prints Lead to Arrest.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—A note mysteriously left on the front porch of the Rockingham County Jail plays an important part in charges against John H. Mowbery, 30, accused of the robbery of a McGaheysville filling station of $68 Christmas morning.

The note was left on the porch the day a magistrate's court ordered John Kersey, 50, previously accused of the crime, held for grand jury action. The grand jury did not indict Kersey. Mowbery, who lives in the same house with Kersey, was arrested instead. Kersey was held after bloodhounds followed a trail to his door.

Fingerprints Cause Arrest.

The note was in one of the money bags stolen from the station. Crudely printed on a sheet from a pocket note book, it read:

"Mr. Fawley (Sheriff Charles R. Fawley): I am going to try and correct a mistake. I robbed filling station. I left in direction of Kersey's home, which might have caused bloodhounds to go in that direction. Loot—1 ten spot, 1 five spot, 10 ones, $12, in change; $1 was a silver one. Some cigarettes. Here is one money bag. Yours truly."

Finger prints on the note led to the apprehension of Mowbery. The case has been continued to February 12 for further investigation of the prints.

School Scoffiow Failed.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Mrs. Sallie Bailey was in the woman's cell of the Bristol, Tenn., jail yesterday because she refused to force her children to attend school, according to a city warrant.

Her six children were left at the East State street home without food or fuel, but police secured Slavation Army assistance for them. Their father is dead.

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). A verdict for the defendant was returned yesterday in Washington County Circuit Court in the $5,000 damage suit of Wiley Wise, of Abingdon, against S. T. Combs, night policeman here.

Woman Charges Attempted Attack

Identifies Man Secretly Jailed in Queen Anne.

Centerville, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—A negro, known to authorities as William Magee, was held in the Queen Anne County Jail here today on a charge of attempting to assault a white woman last Wednesday at Easton in nearby Talbot County.

The arrest was kept secret by authorities, until today when revealed by members of the family of Mrs. Laura Morton, at Aston, who identified Magee as the man who grabbed her near her home and tried to choke her. Her screams, the family said, brought aid as the attacker fled.

Magee was arrested shortly afterwards and brought secretly to the jail here. A hearing has been scheduled for early this week at Easton.

Norfolk Pastor Offered Church In Winchester

Presbyterian Congregation Gives Rev. McGukin Unanimous Call.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Rev. E. B. McGukin, pastor of Lafayette Presbyterian Church, Norfolk, today was extended a call to the pastorate of the Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church here.

The pastorate here has been vacant since the death last summer of the Rev. Frank T. McFaden.

Stewart Bell, committee chairman, addressing a congregational meeting today, said the Rev. McGukin was the unanimous choice of the church session, deacons and committee.

The Rev. McGukin is a native of Georgia. He attended Davidson College, North Carolina, and was graduated from Union Theological Seminary, Richmond.

He is 31 and married. He has been pastor of the Norfolk church four years.

Child Health Drive Started At Hagerstown

CWA Men's Families Will Be Aided by Program.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Two nurses, obtained through the National Reemployment Service, have been engaged to augment the work of the local public health nurses. They will visit families of those employed on CWA projects to check on health of the children.

This is the beginning here of the child health study program being inaugurated in every county of Maryland as a Civil Works project.

Seventy-one CWA workers, from as many projects here, successfully passed first-aid examinations, following classes held last week under direction of the local Red Cross chapter.

One worker will be assigned to each project to take care of first-aid work. Thirteen local physicians assisted with the classes.

Census Completed.

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). With completion of the census of Lonaconing, as ordered by the mayor and town council, the population as recorded by City Clerk J. Milton Dick, is 4,391.

Of this total, 2,564 are within the corporate limits, a gain of 138 since the 1930 census on which Lonaconing is being based by the Federal Government, which reduced working time of CWA workers to 15 hours weekly. This is 14 more than is necessary to place the town under the 24-hour CWA work classification.

The figures, according to the city clerk, have been presented to those in charge of SWA in this vicinity as well as Washington in an effort to secure the full-time basis for Lonaconing workers.

Mine Sealing Progresses.

Thomas, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). The Federal Government project to seal abandoned coal mines in this section is making progress.

Samuel E. Hawkshaw, supervisor of Tucker, Grant, Mineral and Randolph counties, states that the P. C. Clark mine has been sealed and work will start on Mine No. 28, of the Davis Coal & Coke Co., at Benbush, 2 miles from Thomas. This mine has been colsed for ten years and coal remaining in this operation is being taken out through the Coketon mine of the same company. Fifteen men are working on these projects.

Sergt. Schmid Ends 28 Years in Army

30th Ordnance Company to Give Farewell Fete.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—John Schmid, master sergeant of the Thirtieth Ordnance Company here, will be retired Wednesday after more than 28 years of continuous military service.

Sergt. Smith, born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in 1883, enlisted December 27, 1905, at Scranton, Pa., serving until 1911 with Company C, Twenty-third Infantry. From 1911 to 1915 he was a private in the Marine Corps, and on reenlistment, joined the Ordnance Corps. During the World War he was in five engagements and was wounded twice.

Members of the Thirtieth Ordnance Company will give a farewell dinner in his honor Tuesday night. He will reside in Baltimore.

Brewer Named At Hagerstown

Democrat Is Appointed as Commissioner of Streets.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Clyde E. Brewer, Democrat, has been named to the board of street commissioners, succeeding J. Vincent Jamison, jr., whose term expires next month.

Brewer served a short term as commissioner during recent litigation between the mayor and council and the board of street commissioners, when Jamison was temporarily removed from office but reinstated by court order.

Nine Candidates Announce.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl). Nine candidates are seeking nomination in the April primary for the city council to be elected at the June election. There are four vacancies to be filled.

The candidates are T. R. Turner, Wistar M. Heald and H. C. Featherson, incumbents, and L. E. Lichford, Basil G. Watkins, George M. Snead, Edgar M. Shaner, P. H. Dirom and G. H. Wilkins.

Petitions also are being circulated to bring Frank L. Thomasson, attorney, into the race.

Mayor John Victor has declined to run after more than 20 years in the council.

Culpeper Wins Power Ruling

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Another victory for Culpeper was the ruling in the case of the Virginia Public Service Co. against the Town of Culpeper, argued in the Virginia Supreme Court in Richmond this week. The decision was made known here last night.

In the suit, the utility company sought to restrain Culpeper from issuing $120,000 worth of general obligation bonds to finance the building of a municipal power plant, the contention being that the act of Legislature in special session last September, empowering the town council to incur a bonded indebtedness without submitting the question to a vote of the people was unconstitutional.

"Double Taxation" Upheld by Judge

State Utility Income Tax Approved by Court.

Richmond, Jan. 28 (AP).—Judge John L. Ingram in Richmond Hustings Court has upheld the State tax department's right to tax income received from the stocks of Virginia Public Service Corporations.

The decision was made yesterday on a claim by attorneys for the estate of the late Eppa Hunton, jr., that dividends received by the estate from the stocks of railroads which were taxed in Virginia were not subject to any further tax.

Judge Ingram ruled that a tax upon an income received by an individual from stock of a State corporation was not a duplication of taxes levied upon the corporation itself.

Rayon Labor Meet Called at Clifton

Leader Answers Critic of Pulp Work Effort.

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). A meeting for the purpose of organizing the employes of the Industrial Rayon Corporation's plant in Covington has been called for February 1.

S. W. Justice, of this city, condemned criticism of Clifton Forge labor leaders in organizing the pulp mill works as being unjust, saying that Clifton Forge was in no way responsible for what he did as he was acting in his capacity as State organizer for the Virginia Federation of Labor.

Marylanders Fined For Moonshining

3 Union Bridge Men Found Guilty of Manufacture.

Westminster, Md., Jan 28 (Spl.). Found guilty of unlawful manufacture of intoxicating beverage for sale without license, Gallord Putnam, Detour and Earl Crabbs, Union Bridge, were each fined $500 and costs by Magistrate George E. Benson.

Crabbs was jailed in default of fine while Putnam appealed and was released under bond for trial in February in Circuit Court. Putman and Crabbs were arrested December 17 following a raid on Putman's property, when four deputy sheriffs discovered 50 gallons of liquor, 4,000 gallons of mash and a 750-gallon still in operation, one of the largest ever confiscated in Carroll County.

The charge against Crabbs and Putman was the first of its kind to be prosecuted here under the new liquor law in Carroll County.

Maj. C. D. Clark Buried in Toronto

War Veteran, Clubman Dies Suddenly.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). The funeral of Maj. Charles D. Clark, 56, World War veteran, clubman and insurance dealer, who died suddenly following a heart attack in his office, was held at Toronto, Canada, today. Charles S. Catherman accompanied the body.

Maj. Clark came to Cumberland in 1918, following his discharge from the Army. He suffered severe shell wounds in France. He was secretary of the Kiwanis Club, secretary and treasurer of the Cumberland Country Club and a member of the Masons and Elks.

He was unmarried. Two brothers survive: Howard E. Clark, Toronto, and Robert J. Clark, Kansas City, Mo.

Control Board Named For Peanut Dealers

Suffolk, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Charles F. Taylor, of Lummis & Co., and H. C. Smithers, of the Columbian Peanut Co., of Norfolk, will serve as a control board of the Virginia-Carolina Peanut Association.

These two were named at a meeting of millers and cleaners held here, following adoption of the marketing agreement. The control board will hear complaints and will act as a governing board for the association.

William Sluss, 81, Paid Last Tribute

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for William Sluss, 81, native of New Market, Va., and retired Baltimore & Ohio Railroad employe.

He resided here for 19 years. Interment was in Queens Point Cemetery with rites of the Odd Fellows. His widow and a daughter, Virginia Sluss, survive.

Brent High Alumni Elects.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). The Margaret Brent High School Alumni Society has elected Bernard Cullins, president; John Chaporis, vice president, and Miss Eleanor Guy, secretary-treasurer. This organization will hold a dance at the school near Helen, February 10.

Mrs. Annie L. Pritchett Is Buried at Danville

Danville, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held at Whitmell today for Mrs. Annie Laurie Pritchett, who died on Saturday at the home of Mrs. F. C. Beverley, sister of Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson.

Mrs. Pritchett was seriously ill a week. She was a native of Whitmell and resided there her entire life. She was the widow of Dr. Le Roy Pritchett.

Luray Seeking Site For City's Airport

Luray, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The Luray town council has appointed a committee to secure an option on a tract of land for an airport.

Virginia Hatchery Meetings Called Committees to Enforce Code Will Be Selected.

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Committees to enforce the National Commercial and Breeder Hatchery Code will be elected at district meetings to be held next week, Harry L. Moore, poultry specialist of the Virginia Agricultural Extension Division, announced today.

The district meetings will be held at the following places: District 1, courthouse, Marion, 10:30 a. m., Friday; District 2, Roanoke Hotel, Roanoke, 1:30 p. m., Thursday; District 3, Y. M. C. A., Lynchburg, 10:30 a. m., Thursday; District 7, Murphy's Hotel, Richmond, 1 p. m., Monday, February 5; District 8, courthouse, Tappahannock, 10:30 a. m., Tuesday, February 6; District 9, chamber of commerce, Suffolk, 10:30 a. m., Wednesday, February 7.

Districts 4, 5 and 6 held meetings at Harrisonburg, Warrenton and Orange, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this past week.

"Patriotic" Ham, Gift For Roosevelt Birthday

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). An 11-pound Virginia ham, wrapped in red, white and blue sylphwrap, was mailed yesterday as a birthday present to President Roosevelt by C. A. Abbey, manager of the Princess Anne Hotel here.

Accompanying this famed product of the Old Dominion was a note informing the President of the benefit ball to be given at the hotel on his birthday anniversary Tuesday evening.

Roanoke Real Estate Committee Appointed

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—A real estate board committee, composed of E. F. Jamison, L. L. Rush and M. E. Murray, has been named here to consider fostering a movement of the Virginia Real Estate Association to advance the interest of owners and users of real estate.

Henry P. Glasgow, president of the real estate board here, said the committee is to report Friday.

Nation Awaits Gala Presidential Fetes

Washington, New York, Palm Beach Adopt Different Motifs to Celebrate Roosevelt's Birthday for Warm Springs Benefit.

Today and tomorrow find thousands of persons over the United States adding last-minute touches to their plans for the President's birthday balls, of which the proceeds will go to the endowment fund for the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation.

While Washington is planning a gala evening tomorrow at the Shoreham Hotel, one hears New York and Palm Beach are planning elaborate entertainments with unusual features. The ball in New York will be at the Waldorf-Astoria in the grand ballroom and the highlight will be the colorful pageant. The program will include a ceremonial guard mount by the members of the Seventh Regiment in their traditional full-dress uniform, a "jig-saw puzzle," solved by 16 debutantes, and an "aviation dance." The climax will center around a gigantic birthday cake for the President surrounded by 52 candles, which will be impersonated by the same number of prominent young women.

Among the young women to take part in the pageant will be Miss Margaret C. Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Roosevelt, who will be in a gorgeous costume representing "Miss Liberty;" Mrs. Edward Thornborn Griffith, as "Gold;" Miss Hope Iselin, as "Silver;" Mrs. Robert Hilliard, as "Freedom," and Mrs. Andrew Pierce 3d, as "Loyalty."

President's Mother Given Honor Box.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, will occupy the honor box and upon her arrival the "Warm Springs Waltz," written in honor of the occasion, will be played.

At the Waldorf-Astoria a detail of soldiers from Governors Island, through the courtesy of Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, of sailors and marines from the Navy Yard, through the courtesy of Rear Admiral Yates Sterling, jr., and members of the Seventh Regiment, through the courtesy of Col. Ralph C. Tobin, will participate in the ceremony, which will culminate in the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The ball at Palm Beach, Fla., will be of an entirely different scheme. The motif will be of the "Gay Nineties." The dance will be held in the east ballroom of the Everglades Club, which will be transformed to represent a dance hall of the 90s, and outstanding characters of that day will be impersonated by the members of the Palm Beach colony.

The entire room will be a replica of the period, and the costumes will be in keeping with traditions of those days.

Washington "in Dark" As to Ball Program.

Washington society has not been informed as to what the entertainment at the ball tomorrow evening at the Shoreham Hotel will be, but it is understood there will be many interesting events on the program.

It is interesting to note that although Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty make their home in both New York and Florida they have elected to attend the ball in Washington. Among those who have taken tables tomorrow evening and will entertain their friends are:

Mr. Ray Baker will have as guests at his table the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry D. Roosevelt, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, the United States Ambassador to Prussia, Mr. William C. Bullitt, Mrs. Hugh Dilman and Miss Marguerite Le Hand.

Miss Elizabeth Hall Fesser Bride of Donald Macleary

Ceremony Takes Place at Church of Heavenly Rest, New York.

Miss Elizabeth Hall Fesser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Fesser, of Pleasant Valley, N. Y., was married Saturday afternoon to Mr. Donald Lachlon Macleary, of Washington, in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, the rector, the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, officiating. A small reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Beverley R. Robinson.

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Robinson. She wore a gown of white satin with long fitted sleeves and a high cowl neckline. The skirt was draped to form a train and her veil was of rare old point lace which had been worn by her grandmother, the late Mrs. Edward Fesser, at her wedding in 1864. She carried calla lilies.

Mrs. Charles Dallas Reach, of Summit, N. J., was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Emilie Winslow, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and Miss Jewell Bunnell, of Westfield, N. J. Mr. Ralph I. McElvenny, of Salt Lake City, was the best man.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Macleary will reside at 2920 Ontario road, Washington. The bride, a debutante of this season, was graduated from St. Mary's School, Peekskill, N. Y., in 1932, and has been attending Sweet Briar College. On her father's side she is a niece of the late Mrs. Richard Delafield, of Tuxedo Park, and is descended from the Lentilhon family, of New York, and the Fesser family, of Cuba. Through her mother she is descended from the Poillons, a French Huguenot family that settled on Staten Island in the seventeenth century.

Mr. Macleary attended the Hill Military Academy, Portland, Oreg., and Phillips Exeter Academy, Andover, Mass., and was graduated from the University of Colorado law school in 1931. He is a member of Chi Psi Fraternity. He is now with the law firm of Esch, Kerr, Woolley, Taylor & Shibe, in Washington.

Squeezing the Declarer.

One of the prettiest defensive hands it has been my pleasure to hear about in a long while took place in a pair event of the American Bridge League Tournament at Cincinnati last month. Messrs. Oswald Jacoby and Edward Hymes, jr., of New York, playing against the strong Cleveland combination of Messrs. O. S. Emrich and Elmer Babin, succeeded in defending a hand so well that the unfortunate Declarer was forced to go down three tricks. The last few tricks of the hand found the Declarer's hand completely squeezed, and it was not a squeeze that was stumbled into, but one that was carefully prepared for in the early play by Messrs. Jacoby and Hymes.

Using the Boland Club System, North and South reached the final contract of three notrump, with South as the Declarer. Mr. Hymes opened the nine of clubs and a low one was played from Dummy, Mr. Jacoby's Queen winning the trick. Recognizing the short suit Opening, and knowing that an immediate club continuation would avail little, Mr. Jacoby quickly returned his highest spade in an effort to kill the Declarer's hand as quickly as possible so that the defense could concentrate on locking the Declarer in the Dummy.

Mr. Emrich was naturally forced to pass this spade trick, realizing that he had to attempt to make tricks somewhere. West won the trick with the King of spades and now returned his top diamond. A low card of that suit was correctly played from Dummy, and Mr. Jacoby won the trick. East, now feeling confident that the Declarer was—for the time being at least—shut out of his own hand, proceeded to lead a small club, which was won by Dummy's lone Ace.

For want of something better to do, Mr. Emrich played his four good diamonds, and was then compelled to lead a heart. A low card was led and Mr. Jacoby won with the Ten, quickly returning another heart. At this point, Mr. Hymes made what was probably the star play of the entire hand by failing to win the trick, playing his Queen and forcing Dummy's King to win. Naturally a heart was returned and won by Mr. Hymes' Ace, but it was this extra round of hearts which now completely squeezed Declarer and enabled the defense to take the rest of the tricks. Mr. Hymes, after winning the Ace of hearts, had left in his hand a low club and the eight of spades, while Mr. Jacoby had the King and one club. Mr. Emrich, unfortunately, was unable to keep both the high spade and the Knave-Ten of clubs, and whichever card he released would give the defense the rest of the tricks. Actually, Mr. Emrich threw the last spade, and Mr. Hymes cashed his eight-spot, the last trick being won by Mr. Jacoby's King of clubs.

Admittedly North and South got to an overly ambitious contract, but with the diamond suit breaking three and three and the heart honors correctly located it took superfine defense to defeat the contract three tricks.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South is playing a contract of six hearts. How should he develop the hand to fulfill his contract after West opens the club Queen?

Young Democrats Plan Benefit Ball

Party Saturday Will Aid Warm Springs Fund.

President Roosevelt's Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis will be benefited by the Midwinter Ball of the District of Columbia Division, Young Democratic Clubs of America, at the Willard Hotel on Saturday night. Mrs. Helen Griffin, chairman of the division's social committee, who is planning the ball, announced yesterday that the entire proceeds will be turned over to Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman of the committee here charged with raising part of the $2,000,000 needed for the foundation.

Men and women high in governmental and administration circles who are interested in the youth movement, have been invited to act as patrons and patronesses for the ball. Among them are: The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, J. F. T. O'Connor, the Comptroller of the Currency; former Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross, of Wyoming, Director of the Mint; Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahony, the District Commissioners, Melvin C. Hazen and Mrs. Hazen, George B. Allen and Mrs. Allen and Maj. John C. Gotwals and Mrs. Gotwals; Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, the Democratic National Committeewoman for the District of Columbia; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the Democratic National Committeewoman, and Mrs. John F. Costello and the chairman of the Democratic central committee, John B. Colpoys.

Aiding Mrs. Griffin with the arrangements are Miss Betsy Dern, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern; Miss Lyda Mae Francis, Miss Katherine Amidon, Miss Helen McCallum, Mrs. Madeline Williams, Robert Findley and Earle Griffin.

Women Need Not Grow Old, Author Asserts

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Any woman can be ageless.

Elizabeth Corbett, having already proved this in her latest novel, "A Nice Long Evening"—the story of an 80-year-old woman, who is determined to evade "chimney corner attitudes"—proves it further in her own outlook on life.

Interviewed at the Willard Hotel, after she addressed the National League of American Pen Women at the Celebrity Breakfast, this dainty, blue-eyed young woman with auburn hair and an enviable profile, looked more like a debutante than a successful author. Indeed, her youthful appearance belied the fact that she has written eight books and a number of short stories and essays. Moreover, she was as interested in discussing the problems of novice writers as if she were still a beginner herself.

Only Hardy Should Write.

"First of all, I would advise anybody not to write if she can do anything else in the world," she said. "The writing career entails too many disappointments in its early stages. But if one really wants to write, she won't be happy doing anything else."

Miss Corbett is one of the few writers who never planned to do anything else. Before she was graduated from the University of Wisconsin, she had already made up her mind that the novel was to be her medium of expression. Shortly after graduation, she completed her first book.

"But that one hasn't yet been published," she smiled. "I simply didn't have the knack then. But I kept right on, and I didn't let rejections discourage me."

She does not advise new writers to seek literary agents. It is far better, she thinks, for the novice to send out her own work, and receive her rejection slips, first-hand, until she is well started. "Agents who charge reading fees aren't really in a position to give new writers the advice they need," she stated. "They won't say, for instance, 'Keep on writing for 20 years, and then come back with your manuscripts and we'll try to sell them.' Of course, after the writer is launched, a good agent is easily procured, and he will be helpful in getting better prices from editors."

Doubts "Writing Courses."

Miss Corbett was fortunate in that, while her early experiences were often disappointing, she did not have to suffer the proverbial privations of a new writer. Living at home "off the family" while she was getting started, she didn't have to worry about things that harass many people who set out to live by the pen.

She naturally considers education helpful to authorship, but she isn't so sure courses in writing are necessary. "I'm not really prepared to pass judgment on such courses," she laughed. "You see I've never had one."

Imagination and understanding of human nature, coupled with the will to work—and work hard—are, in her opinion, the most important qualities for a person who is ambitious to write. "There's no getting around the fact that writing is arduous labor," she said. "But even when I'm in the middle of a book, and working my head off, there's something exciting about it. I struggle along with an incident or a character, and all at once everything 'clicks.' That's the real thrill of writing. For me, it's the best thrill in the world. Yet I've known many people—intelligent people—who couldn't somehow express themselves on paper. That's why I think that imagination is more essential to the author than superior intelligence.

Characters Dominant.

She believes that while the plot of a novel deserves some consideration, the characters are infinitely more important. Consequently, she begins with a character in some unusual situation, and develops the narrative from that point. Her last two books, "The Young Mrs. Meigs" and its sequel, "A Nice Long Evening," were woven around a woman of 80 who wanted to be almost anything but a typical old lady. In fact, in the latter book, "Mrs. Meigs" states emphatically that "If you really wanted to do a thing, you might better do it at 80 than younger; you felt the adventure of it more."

In reality "Mrs. Meigs" is a Mrs. Wright, who is still living in the town in Wisconsin where Miss Corbett was reared. The portraiture is so faithful and convincing that many acquaintances of this delightful old lady call her "Mrs. Meigs."

Heroine Is Now 95.

"Since I wrote 'A Nice Long Evening,'" said Miss Corbett, "Mrs. Wright, now 95, seems to have taken a new lease on life. She is still going strong and now thinks that she will live to be 106!"

Although she has a warmer affection for her last two novels, because she is personally acquainted with the principal character, Miss Corbett is the author of six other books, including a study of Walt Whitman and a dramatic biography of Grant.

Born in Illinois and educated in Wisconsin, Miss Corbett now lives in New York, where she is working on another novel.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 29 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 8:25 to 9:25 a. m., from 4 to 5 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m.

If you were born on January 29 you have a tremendous amount of determination. If you once decide on a fixed course of action and are convinced that you are right, nothing can make you change your mind. You are ambitious and your close application to your work will result eventually in the complete realization of your dreams. On this date guard against signing any receipts or documents you have not carefully read and count with caution any money offered or intrusted to you for safekeeping.

The woman born on Jnuary 29 is full of vitality. High spirited, she is always ready to be on the go. If you were born on January 29, it is remarkable the amount of endurance you possess. You will succeed in nay business that requires a very active woman. Selling is your particular forte. You admire a man who is a "go-getter," and it is this type of individual you will be happiest with as a mate. You should exercise care not to overexert your physical strength by trying to accomplish too much in one day.

People born on January 29 are progressive and interested in new developments. They display a liberality of thought that at times rather startles their friends. If born on January 29, your ability to grasp advanced ideas enables you to mentally advance much quicker than do most of the people with whom you associate, and for this reason you many times fail to find them congenial. It would be well to remember everyone is not gifted with the same amount of mentality.

Successful people born on January 29:

Home-Making Is Real Career, Educator Says

Finds Divorce Rare Among Graduates of Her Home Economics Course.

And if you doubt that there are scientific helps to making a success of that form of "career," Miss Fedde will check off, on two fingers, the divorcees among 800 graduates of her home economics department at the University of Nebraska.

"If your training doesn't help keep co-eds out of the divorce courts it at least ought to—and there is that one-fourth-of-1-percent divorce quotient for evidence, too, says Miss Fedde, chairman of the department.

"We never mention divorce in our classes, or point to it as a disgrace," she says. "I'm not set against divorce, and at times it is the only way.

"But we do emphasize homemaking and regard it definitely as a career. You make a success of a career only by studying it and taking responsibility for its success."

She explains that the one-fourth-of-1-per-cent figure may be a bit inaccurate inasmuch as only 380 of the 800 graduates have, as yet, married, but even so she is proud of the record.

Glancing at the totals of successful homemakers among the graduates, Miss Fedde comments that even in the last decade the department has shifted its emphasis and the girls have changed their attitude.

"More homemaking and less housekeeping has been our creed," she smiles. "Not that sweeping and baking and sewing aren't important, but we're thinking now more in terms of living and family relationships. We tell the girls that even if they don't marry they probably will keep a home some day. I do myself."

Illustrating the changing viewpoint, Miss Fedde relates that a graduate of ten years back was frankly "shocked" when told that the modern co-ed is learning how to make a home for a husband and admits it as a matter of course.

Paris Bathing Suits Speed Toward Zero

Mannequins Blush as They Display New Models.

Paris, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—An all-time record for beach undress has been set by Paris dressmakers in the 1934 bathing suits.

The "new low" in backs is so low, indeed, that some mannequins blush as they parade before the buyers.

The House of Worth shows a backless suit cut so low that half the hips are visible. The mannequins seem hesitant to drop their covering wraps to give buyers a glimpse of the suits and hastily cover themselves after a brief inspection.

Most dressmakers feature beach pajamas composed of several garments hung on a single button. They are devised to allow the removal of separate arms, legs, backs and fronts to allow piecemeal sunburning.

Other suits are composed merely of abbreviated trunks and a brassiere, held on by a string of beads.

The Story Thus Far.

Convicted of the murder of Gervase Benham, Cecil Brandt is to be hanged. One man alone has the power to intercede for him; England's young Home Secretary, Sir Humphrey Rossiter. He stubbornly refuses to do so. The night before the execution—while motoring to London following a visit to Lord Keynsham in Norfolk County—he is kidnaped. Four masked men seize him, whisk him to a mysterious house, place him on a gallows. "Promise to grant Brandt a reprieve," says the leader, "or die!"

*Sir Humphrey will promise nothing. The hangman adjusts the noose. Then—a messenger arrives. Sir Humphrey is informed that Katherine Brandt, the condemned man's wife, has important new evidence to offer. "I will hear it," he promises. * * * Released, he meets Mrs. Brandt, an actress whom he has known for years. Impressed by her story, he promises to order a reprieve at once. She leaves—and he collapses, faints. When he recovers consciousness, Cecil Brandt has been hanged!*

Commissioner Moore, of Scotland Yard, puts his best men on the case. Katherine Brandt is to dine with Sir Humphrey, in his home. She fails to arrive. Alarmed, Sir Humphrey phones Scotland Yard. Subcommissioner Matterson hurries over, interviews Sir Humphrey, then leaves the room to report to headquarters. When he returns, Sir Humphrey has disappeared! The operatives work feverishly. One goes to Mrs. Brandt's hotel. Her trunks, he finds, are there—packed, ready for a trip to France. Her maid (who has the only keys) opens one of them. It is in wild disorder—has been hurriedly ransacked by some mysterious intruder.

Chapter VIII.

Very greatly to the relief of the established authorities a sensational murder, committed during the next few days, was followed by the brilliant arrest of the criminal in the act of boarding the steamship on which he was attempting to leave the country, and within a few hours two long-sought-for criminals were also brought to justice.

Scotland Yard basked in a glow of almost lyrical praise from the experts and from the press. Half a dozen undetected murders of the usual type in Chicago also stirred people's imagination. "England's police service the finest in the world," was the headline displayed by a leading newspaper. In the midst of it all, however, the prime minister sent for Gen. Sir Harold Moore, who found his way to Downing street in some trepidation.

"I have sent for you, General," the prime minister said, congratulations having first been offered and accepted, "to ask you to tell me exactly what has become of my home secretary, Rossiter."

"I wish to God I knew, sir," was the rueful reply.

Prime Minister Mystified.

"I fail to understand the situation," the prime minister continued. "I have addressed several personal letters to Chestow Square marked 'To be forwarded,' and I have written myself to Miss Rossiter, who is the only relative of Rossiter's I have ever known.

"The letters have been returned to me with the remark that Sir Humphrey is not at Chestow Square, and Miss Rossiter has written me that she has no knowledge whatever of her brother's whereabouts, and adds that she understands Scotland Yard is interesting itself in the matter. The young man, Hugh Carthew, Rossiter's private secretary, is either lying or he knows even less."

The chief commissioner took his courage into his hands and recounted the full story of Sir Humphrey's two disappearances. The prime minister's surprise when he had finished was obvious.

"Do you seriously mean to tell me, general," he asked, "that you have had three of your best men in Norfolk for all this time, and that they have been absolutely unable to trace where Sir Humphrey was taken from a well-known country house in a sparsely populated county?"

Complete Failure.

"I regret to say that they seem to have failed completely," the chief commissioner acknowledged. "They are coming back this afternoon and I will let you have a copy of their full report."

The prime minister indulged in an impatient gesture.

"And, furthermore," he continued, "do you mean to tell me that Sir Humphrey stepped out of his own window in Chestow Square, while you were in the next room, and disappeared on a Sunday night so completely that you have found no trace of him in London ever since?"

"I am afraid that it is quite true, sir."

"And what is this about the lady—Mrs. Brandt—who never turned up for dinner? Katherine Brandt, the actress, I understand."

"She, too, disappeared the same night," the chief commissioner confessed. "We have had good men on the case without result. We have no idea whatever has become of Mrs. Brandt."

"Amazing!" the prime minister exclaimed.

"I know that it must seem amazing to any one," his visitor acknowledged. "I hope you will not forget, sir, that Scotland Yard has come through a great many ordeals with flying colors, and I think our work this week is noteworthy. Here, as I admit, we have for the moment completely failed, but the truth will come out. We shall succeed sooner or later—"

"But in the meantime I want my Home Secretary," was the impatient interruption. "Every one of his departments is complicated, and, like a great many other staff men, he carried far too much in his head. Call a meeting of your heads of departments when you get back, general. Explain to them the fix we are in."

"We have a conference arranged for this evening," the general confided.

"Let me know the result tomorrow morning, and what news you have from the men who have been down in Norfolk. Breakfast with me if you can at half-past 8. We can have a few minutes together then before I get into harness."

"With great pleasure," the Chief Commissioner, who hated alike early rising and breakfast, lied. "I hope I shall have some news for you."

Norfolk had apparently not agreed with either Chief Inspector Smithers or Inspector Simpson. They both had the depressed and irritated air of men who had to report a failure. Pank, on the other hand, whose appearance was too insignificant for more than passing notice, seemed exactly as usual.

"Well, gentlemen," the Chief Commissioner greeted them, waving them to chairs, "your reports have not disclosed very much. I am hoping you have been keeping something back."

Both Smithers and Simpson shook their heads.

"It has been the most disappointing week I ever spent," the former recounted. "We started, as you know, at Keynsham Hall. Every one there was most anxious to help. We had the free use of motorcars, men who knew every by-road placed at our disposal, and Lady Louise herself accompanied us on more than one occasion and introduced us to people who were likely to be difficult. In fact, every scrap of information was ready for us almost before we could ask for it. We worked out the times and we visited practically every country house in Norfolk within a possible radius. There was nowhere any place which corresponded in the least with Sir Humphrey Rossiter's description."

Failure No. 1.

"Failure No. 1," the Chief Commissioner remarked.

"What about the hired car?" Colonel Matterson, who had just come in, inquired.

"The hired car was telephoned for by a garage in Fakenham," Smithers confided. "Keynsham Hall rang them up, but they hadn't anything good enough, so Lord Edward, who seems to have spoken himself, told them to send to Preston & Sons in Norwich. The car was a Strathcombe, and the chauffeur a man who had an excellent character, but who had been with the firm only three weeks. He was hired specially for night work."

"And where are they now—the man and the car?" Matterson asked.

"The car was back in its place at 3 o'clock next morning, just about the time it was expected," Smithers recounted. "The man went back to his lodgings to wash and dress; after a night job they are always allowed to take six to eight hours off. Late in the afternoon he turned up, took the car out, just leaving word with the porter that he had a job, and he has not been seen or heard of since."

"You inquired at his lodgings, of course?"

"I did that on the same day," Inspector Simpson replied. "The man came back, paid his bill, packed his bag, left his room exactly as it had been when he had taken possession. Not a scrap of writing nor an article of clothing, not a tie, not a button. He said that he was going to London. Whether he went or not, no one knows.

"We have got his description, of course, although it doesn't altogether agree with Sir Humphrey's. We thought that with your permission we would get out placards and offer a reward. Frame a case against him for faulty lights or something of that sort. It seems to be the only chance of finding him quickly."

"So that you have come back with practically nothing to report?" the chief commissioner remarked slowly.

"Not a thing, sir," Smithers acknowledged. "I never was on a worse job in my life. Everyone willing to help us. Lady Louise taking us out herself to the most likely spots and introducing us and doing everything she could think of. No one showed the least hesitation in throwing the whole of their places open to us. There were some big farmhouses, some just about the right distance, too, that seemed likely, but there was not one of them answered to the description when we came to examine it. There's no use beating about the bush, sir; we have been on a fool's errand and we are no nearer a clew to this night ride of Sir Humphrey's than before we undertook it."

"What about you, Pank?" Col. Matterson asked. "You don't seem to have much to say for yourself."

"I'm sorry, sir, Pank confessed, with a nervous little cough. "I ought perhaps to have reported sick and come back. I caught a very bad feverish cold and I couldn't do much good. I was able to make out the list of places for the others, to give them the mileage, and I happened to know the people where the chauffeur lodged and I got his description; otherwise, I'm afraid that I was a washout."

There was a moment's silence. Then the chief commissioner asked an abrupt question.

"You have heard what has happened up here?"

Capt. Rhoda Milliken Says Normally Refined Are Rowdiest Drunk.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The most refined women, when sober, are the rowdiest when drunk.

In proportion to their numbers, there are as many members of the "upper crust" hailed into court for drunkenness as there are members of the riff-raff.

The riff-raff chooses the week-end for its sprees.

The "upper crust" women scatter their hours of inebriation throughout the week. They are as likely to be brought to the detention house on Tuesday night as on Saturday.

These conclusions have been reached by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, after a year and a half as head of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department.

"Drunks are our greatest problem because we have no place to put them," said the youthful head of the Woman's Bureau in her office at the House of Detention, 1224 Fifth street northwest. "Some of them are brought in here in a 'windmill' condition, with arms and legs waving around in every direction. They scream and carry on and use dreadful language.

"With our present accommodations, these wild inebriates must be put in little rooms that are just off the dormitories. Of course, they can be heard all over the place. That is bad for the morale and for the nerves of other inmates, some of whom are 17-year-old girls held for minor offenses."

"But we hope to remedy this situation soon. If the Civil Works Administration will aid us, we will give our drunks a private wing of the building where then can sober up without annoying anyone but themselves. This wing will consist of three small rooms over a garage that adjoins the main building. We never refer to our rooms as cells. But the quarters for the intoxicated women, if we get them, will be as barren as cells."

CAPT. RHODA MILLIKEN, as head of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, has charge of Washington's intoxicated women from the time they are arrested until they are hailed into court.

Capt. Milliken said she believed she had had more cases of drunkenness in the last three months, not because more women had taken to drink, but because the old-timers had been getting bad liquor which made them so obstreperous that the police had to be called.

"Some of the liquor that has poured into Washington in the last 90 days," she said, "has been so potent that it took only a few drinks to make a woman think she could climb the Washington Monument. After a glass or two of this powerful stuff, there were disturbances on the street, in apartments and hotel lobbies. The police had to be called.

"In the 90 days from October 1 to January 1 we have had 321 drunken women brought to us by the police. And I'm afraid that that number won't be much less even when liquor—so-called good liquor—can be sold legally in Washington. It will undoubtedly make some difference among the upper classes. But the people who are struggling along in sordid, congested, poverty-stricken areas won't have the money to buy legal alcoholic drinks. They will continue to spend their dimes for shots of 'high moon,' and if there is anything that can make a person more fiendishly drunk than 'high moon,' I have yet to hear of it.

"Week-ends are our busiest times. We always have a full house then. Our accommodations are supposed to take care of 32, but our week-end average now varies from 35 to 45, while 2 years ago it was only 30. Of course not all of those cases are intoxication cases. But one drunken woman is harder to handle than a half-dozen ordinary cases. That is why we need those three additonal rooms so badly.

"Over the week-ends we have just twice as many colored women as white. The white ones do their drinking on week-days so that the number is evenly divided from Monday to Saturday. In former years I understand that only women of questionable character were brought into court for drunkenness. But nowadays we get debutantes, society women, college girls, and professional women. Most of that class come here just once. Then they either reform or use discretion when they imbibe. But there is a small group, composed of the lower class, that comes here again and again. Those women have learned to feel at home here. But I hope that I will soon be able to show them to new rooms over the garage when they come for their week-end visit," concluded the head of the Woman's Bureau.

Scanty Space for Detention Adds to Difficulties Encountered.

Mme. Prochnik, American Born, Eagerly Awaits Visit to Vienna

Describes Charm Washington Holds for Women of Diplomatic Corps as Freedom From Formality Not Enjoyed in Other Capitals—Ambitions of Her Children.

Dazzled by the glamor which surrounds the life of the diplomat, the world at large often fails to remember that here are men and women who lead a very simple and human sort of life. That in their simplicity and sympathy lies their greatness, and their consummate ability to interpret the culture and national dignity of their respective countries to people of other lands.

By Elizabeth Young.

Those who find letter-writing a difficult art could profit by the example of Mme. Prochnik, wife of Austria's Minister to the United States.

Mme. Prochnik, who was Gretchen James, of Boston, before her marriage, solves the problem with the resourcefulness of the true American by keeping a day-by-day diary, in which she jots down all the interesting happenings of her busy life: the places she goes, the people she meets, events which transpire.

"Then, when I sit down to write, it simply isn't possible that one should meet that specter of inept letter writers, 'nothing to talk about,'" she smiled. "Instead, there is endless material to draw from."

She started her diary years ago, following her marriage in Minneapolis to the then Austro-Hungarian consul in that city, Mr. Edgar Prochnik. The purpose was to enable her to maintain a fuller, more understanding touch with her own family, by keeping them apprised of the form her new life was taking. Today, she has 25 volumes of such personal narrative. And her step-daughter, now Mrs. Francis Spalding, wife of the United States Vice Consul at Zurich, long ago adopted her mother's practice.

"By means of our diaries, my daughter and I could simply pick up where we had left off in each other's lives, when she returned on vacations from school. She finished her studies in Switzerland and spent several months in Vienna. I would like for Valerie—(Valerie is her sub-debutante daughter)—to have some time in Vienna. She is greatly interested in music."

Mme. Prochnik expects in the near future to add an interesting volume to her collection of diaries. The Prochniks are about to realize a long-anticipated return visit to Austria, where they have not been since the close of the war.

"It is most unusual that we haven't gone before," she said. "But it has been difficult to plan a time for going when the people we want to see will be there. We're going this year, for a month or six weeks during the season when the most interesting people will be in Vienna.

Austria Admires U. S.

"After this visit, I expect to be in much closer touch, mentally, with my husband's country than before. People in Austria are tremendously interested in how we Americans do things. They feel we're a very progressive Nation.

"Austrian women are devoted to the cause of world peace, and are working for it through the women of the world. A great many Austrian women attend the Peace conferences at Geneva, for the purpose of meeting women of other countries and establishing international understanding and friendship between individuals.

"And I am greatly interested in Austrian women. They give liberally of their means and time to charitable work, and I have always wished I could join with them in their work more fully than I have been able to do. But when one belongs to two countries, both of which support so many worthy causes, it is not possible to do all that one would for each.

Charm of Washington.

"Our children, of course, having been brought up in America, have no feeling as yet for any country but America, although Edgar, jr., has declared an ambition to follow in his father's footsteps in the diplomatic service, and to study at the Maria Theresa Consular Academy, in Vienna, from which his father was graduated.

"All of us love Washington. My husband always says, when returning to Washington, that it is one of the nicest cities to come back to that he has ever visited.

"It is not an American city, in the strictest sense. It is not like any other place I've ever known. It has the charm of a small town, plus the aspect of a cosmopolitan city. I think it the best place in the world to bring up children. The life children lead in Washington is such a normal, natural life.

"Schooling does not take them away from home; most of Washington's school children are home for lunch. And they are free from the formal restraint so often imposed on the children of diplomatic households in other countries.

Less Formality Here.

"I know if our children were to be transplanted to another country, they would feel it quite a lot." She laughed. "I'm afraid the academic requirements of our American schools are not quite so high as those of some other countries. I suspect Edgar, jr., is in for some unpleasant surprises in the way of scholastic requirements should he realize his aspiration to finish his studies in Vienna.

"Women in the diplomatic corps enjoy a greater freedom from formality in Washington than in other capitals, too, I think. They have greater opportunity for developing individual interests, because they are less preoccupied with the rigid ceremonial of etiquette.

"I find the life of a diplomat's wife tremendously interesting. While marriage into the diplomatic corps usually means constant change of post, it has not been so in my case. I am sure I would have found it equally interesting, had it been so. My husband has been stationed in America 23 years, with the exception of the war years. We came to Washington in 1921.

"I have frequently said, however, that we today are less fortunate as to the period in which we live than were those 100 years ago, or those who will follow us 100 years from now. This has been such a turbulent, disintegrated sort of period; we are not sufficiently adjusted to it to comprehend and enjoy it fully.

Beautiful Eyes' Proper Setting Is Imperative

Beautiful eyes often go unnoticed because they lack the proper setting, just as priceless jewels may appear insignificant without adequate surroundings. It is also true that ordinary eyes, like mediocre jewels, can be made much more attractive—if they have a splendid setting, which, for eyes consists of proper eye make-up.

While many women realize what wonders mascara, eye shadow and pencil will do for the eyes, they hesitate to use these aids mainly because they are afraid they will be unable to select the proper colors to suit their types. This is no reason for any woman to deprive herself of eye cosmetics, for selecting flattering and correct shades is quite simple.

In spite of endless variations in coloring of hair, eyes and skin, most women can be divided into three groups—fair, medium and dark. The two standard and most natural looking shades of mascara—brown and black—can easily be apportioned among these three types. Fair women with delicate white skins and blonde hair should wear brown mascara both day and night; those of medium coloring, with brown or red hair and skin neither light nor dark, will find brown most becoming for daytime and black for evening. Vivid brunettes can wear black mascara for all occasions. Brown and black eyebrow pencil should be chosen by the same rules, of course.

A good rule to follow in selecting eye shadow is to use a shade that matches the color of your eyes—blue shadow for blue eyes, brown for brown eyes. There is a delightful blue-gray shadow that enhances that particular tone of eyes to perfection. Exceptions to this rule are two—red-heads with greenish, gray, or hazel eyes and milky skin look stunning with green shadow, especially at night, and girls with olive skin and dusky hair look most exotic with a blur of violet eye shadow on their lids.

Unique Copper Bowl "Filling" Is Discovered

Satiated Society Woman Creates Rich Porcelain Vegetables.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A large copper bowl of varicolored porcelain vegetables caught our eye when we entered the shop. It was so utterly out of the ordinary that we knew there must be a tale in the background. The shop girls all shook their heads, and said no, they didn't think so. But just then the buyer for certain unique odds and ends came by and we asked her.

"Well, yes," she answered slowly. "There is a story I guess. At least sort of one. I heard it when I was in New York. Maybe it's one reason I liked these so much." She picked up one of the lovely purple porcelain cabbages and examined it closely, calling our attention to its perfection.

She told us that when she was doing her "buying" in New York, an interior decorator friend had suggested that she look at the copper ware, and the porcelain vegetables. It seems that one of the city's wealthiest women became, all of a sudden, more bored with life than usual. She disdained travel, turned down all invitations to parties, closed up her Long Island home, refused to open her mail, and literally became a recluse.

And then one day something happened. She called up a real estate company, took a drive with one of the agents, and returned home the proud purchaser of a little suburban home, not quite as large as her own garage.

The family questioned her in vain. She kept busy from morn to night but refused to explain. After about three months she invited them to drive with her one evening to her new "playground."

She had taken the lovely little home and decorated it from attic to cellar in the most captivating manner. But it was the kitchen which stood out for originality. All the utensils were bright, shining copper. In a specially built-in niche stood a large burnished bowl, piled high with poreclain vegetables, like those in our local shop.

There were lovely golden carrots, creamy turnips, silvery green cucumbers, biege canteloupes, vivid red tomatoes, yellow corn and the purple cabbage. The fame of this unique arrangement spread far and wide so that soon people from all over the city were asking to be permitted to go through the house. It was from top to bottom an education in interior decorating. Many of the curious were so struck by the copper bowl and vegetables that they, too, ordered them. In that way they became among the season's most successful—and accidental—creations.

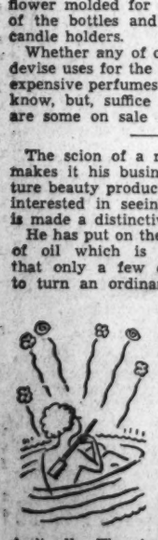
It does sound ridiculous, but we heard the other day of a certain party who couldn't afford to furnish her guest room with the best perfume. So, she bought an empty bottle, bearing the name of one of the most expensive scents, partially filled it with an obscure and inexpensive perfume, and thereby got credit from those who had not the nostrils of connoisseurs.

Someone else told of another "certain party" who bought two elaborate bottles which ordinarily came filled with a frightfully costly perfume. These, however, were empty. She had a little metal flower molded for the top of each of the bottles and used them for candle holders.

Whether any of our shoppers can devise uses for the empty bottles of expensive perfumes or not, we don't know, but, suffice it to say, there are some on sale in a local shop.

The scion of a royal house who makes it his business to manufacture beauty products is particularly interested in seeing that the bath is made a distinctive pleasure.

He has put on the market a bottle of oil which is so concentrated that only a few drops is enough to turn an ordinary tub of water into a perfumed haven. The fragrance is that of—who can say? And that is the charm of the bath oil. Its scent is so delightfully elusive that no one can put his finger on just what fragrance predominates.



But the oil isn't all. There's also soap, available in four fragrances. One of these, Pine Needle it is called, is excellent for men who disdain a sweet scent but appreciate the clean, spicy odor of pine. The soap may be bought in toilet cakes, bath cakes, or in a guest package, which includes six small cakes.

Sweater sets, too, are carrying out this mad splurge of color. There are some new ones in a downtown store which combine green, flame, and white, and others splashed with blue, brown, and white.

Sympathy.

By Katherine Smith.

I hear your bitternesses surge
In haunting monotone.
I know your pain; my timid lips
Can make no moan.

When I am with you I am deaf
As earth's most stubborn stone
But after you have gone, I weep—
And weep alone.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Symptoms.

We complain of symptoms. Not only that, we crystallize our complaint into action. We go to a doctor for relief, and we are satisfied with his service almost in proportion as he brings our symptoms to an end.

That, however, is only a part of the story; symptoms complain to us or, rather, that is the way the organs have of complaining to us. We have a headache, meaning that the brain is complaining to us of something that is being done to it. We have dyspepsia. That means that the stomach is complaining to us of something that is being done to it by the gall bladder, or some other organ, or something else. We have a pain in the chest. That may mean the pleura is telling us that some microbe is bothering it. Or, the symptom may be fever or a rapid pulse.

Whatever it is, it is some part of our internal machinery trying to tell us something. Sometimes the talking organ is trying to inform on another organ. Sometimes the complaint is against the combination called the individual rather than any of its parts. Maybe the symptom is trying to tell us we stayed out too late last night, or we are eating too much or improperly somehow, or we are worrying; or maybe the complaint is of too much drugs, such as alcohol, tobacco, or coffee.

And so the chain goes. The organs complain to us, we complain to the doctor, and the doctor complains that we do not pay up, or are unappreciative otherwise. The chain of complaints seems to need many links. Some day we may have a perfect world. In that day man will be all-understanding and his wisdom will equal his knowledge. In that day we will not try to pass the buck. When a head uses an ache to pray to us for relief, we will recognize the symptom for what it is and not regard it as a complaint to be suppressed.

In that day, when we get heartburn we will say: "Thanks, old man. I will give you a rest. No food for me today. Furthermore, I promise you not to sin against you again." And in that good day we will hold such promises sacred. We have attacks of night indigestion with much belching. We say: "All right, old man gall bladder. I hear your voice. I know you are sorely oppressed. I haven't treated you right. I will listen to you." Or we say: "Thank you, cough. We will try to care for the lungs and bronchial tubes, whose voice you are. Probably a tubercle bacillus or a pneumoccoccus is breaking in and we are grateful for being told about it."

Or it may be an irritable pulse is trying to tell about a disordered thyroid gland. In that good day too much thyroid will be discovered, on the average, some months earlier than is now the rule.

We will be most grateful of all for those symptoms that snitch on us rather than on our organs. We may be grateful for those symptoms that tell us that we are not getting enough sleep; that we are not regular enough in our habits, that we are trying to get through life without a philosophy or without equanimity; that we are being manhandled by fear; that we are eating improperly; or that we are not exercising enough. We may be grateful for these warnings, but if we are the millennium is at hand.

W. J. Bryan Scion Will Carve Career

Mrs. Meeker Ambitious to Excel in the Arts.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The footlights and the literary muses are calling Mrs. Kitty Owen Meeker, granddaughter of the Great Commoner, William Jennings Bryan.

Mrs. Meeker and William P. Meeker, Baltimore broker, were recently divorced. Now she is living in a Greenwich Village apartment with her three children.

"I want to go to work," she said, "and New York seems the logical place to start. I want to do something to make my way—preferably on the stage."

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Tragedy.

As I was on my way to town a happy man was I.
I'd had my fill of breakfast and my feet were warm and dry.
And all my thoughts were lively ones until I chanced to see
A cold and pale-faced woman with her sad eyes turned on me.
I'd kissed my wife and children and their lips were warm and sweet,
And all the world seemed fair to me as I walked down the street;
But there upon the corner where the crowds were hurrying by Stood a shivering beggar woman and she had to catch my eye.
Her cheeks were thin with suffering, her lips with cold were blue,
Her eyes they were so pitiful they seemed to look me through.
And as I turned to go to her I'll swear I heard them say:
"What would you think if one of yours were half as cold today?"
She gave to me a grateful smile as on my way I went,
But all that day I wondered how are lives so sadly bent.
What's wrong in such a world as ours that women folk should be
So cold and friendless and so sad and pitiful to see?

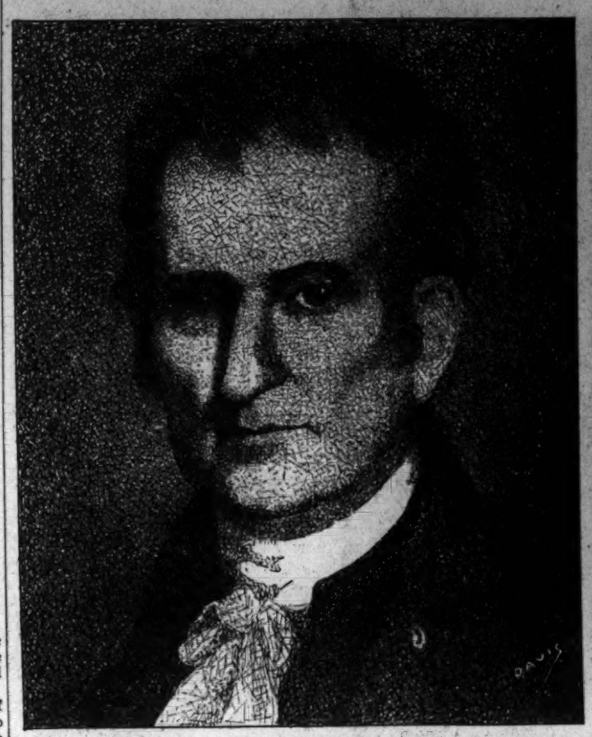
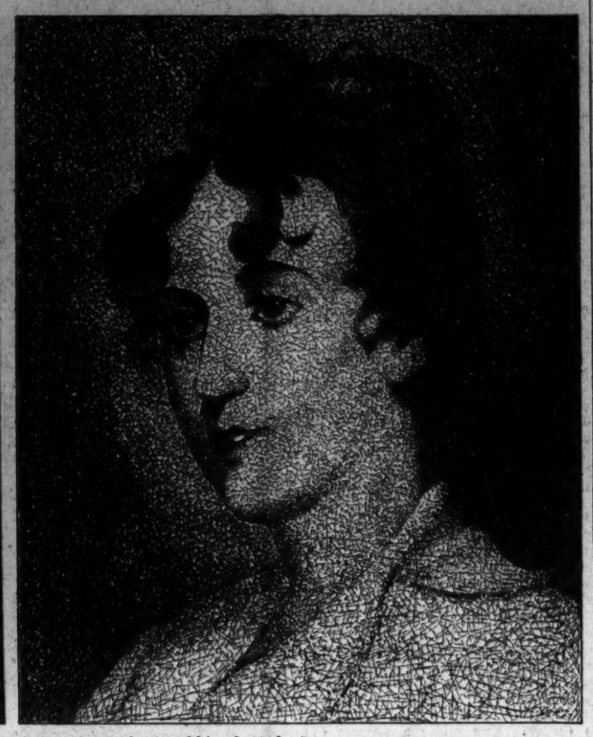
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Lawrence Lewis—Nellie Custis





Engaging romance of first President's favorite nephew and his adopted daughter flowered at Mount Vernon and probably was fostered by Gen. Washington. Nelly Custis was his constant companion in her childhood and lived to be "the center of all eyes." The charm of her name still endures.

Gentle Child Had Charm That Early Captured George Washington.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

Through the quaint rooms of old Mount Vernon on the Potomac and about its spacious grounds and gardens, lingers the wraith of a gentle little girl, named Nelly Custis, who was the darling of George Washington, her adopted "father" and her gracious grandmother, Martha Custis Washington.

Usually, in a romance, the personality of the man is most picturesque and attention-arresting. In the case of Lawrence Lewis, nephew of George Washington, and Nelly Custis, it is this little girl of old Mount Vernon who arouses the keenest interest, due to the fact that George Washington in his frequent references to her in his diaries and letters has preserved her memory for those who were to come after him.

In touching testimony to this fact is a purchase set down by Gen. Washington in his day book during a visit to Philadelphia shortly before Christmas in 1781.

These items read:

A locket, three small pocket-books, three sashes, dress cap, hatt (sic), handkerchief, children's books, whirligig and fiddle.

Washington's Companion.

At home in Mount Vernon, waiting for Santa Claus to bring gifts via the Gen. Washington route, were two children, Eleanor Parke Custis, age 3 "going on 4," and George Washington Parke Custis, 2 years old.

Their presence in the stately mansion was due to the pathetic fact that their father John Parke Custis, son of Mrs. Martha Washington by her first marriage, had died about the time the British troops surrendered at Yorktown, leaving a widow and small children.

Washington comforted the sorrowing widow and Mrs. Washington with the promise that he would adopt the two younger children of John Parke Custis as his own. He remained true to this promise, and one of the children, Nelly Parke Custis, became his special pet.

Little Nelly was always by his side as he sat on the great piazza of the mansion and watched the sailing vessels on the Potomac pass to and fro. She knew that, while "Grandfather" seemed cold to the world, he was ever loving and tender with her, the child of his great heart. It is a matter of history that, underneath the grave exterior of Washington, was a warm current of affection for children. He always remembered them, their names, kept their confidences, soothed their hurts and kept his pockets well lined with little gifts for them. Only a man who truly loves children acts thus.

To his adopted children, whose upbringing was to be his dearest care, he unbent in greater measure—especially to Nelly.

Schoolmaster Chosen.

So the happy years passed by for little Nelly until she was 6 years, and school was to begin. Washington had secured the services of a certain Gideon Snow as schoolmaster for Nellie and little Jack. Legend hath it that school was held in a quaint little octagon house in the garden wall. Nelly is said to have been somewhat of a tomboy, an ardent lover of nature, especially flowers. There was much to interest a little girl at Mount Vernon in those days. Fig trees were trained against the wall of the south garden, and the flowers, shrubs and box-bordered paths of the north garden. It is not hard to visualize the little girl flitting, as though a butterfly, among the fragant, growing things. Often, we may imagine, she would pick a little posy for "Grandfather" and hold it tightly in her warm, chubby fingers until he returned from his morning ride around his domain.

History has not preserved a record of the things which Nelly studied. But we may be certain that her lessons included instruction in the arts of the gentlewoman of her day, deportment, fine sewing, embroidery, painting, knitting and perhaps crewel work, certainly tatting, that quaint stitch beloved of our grandmothers. After a while a new tutor, Tobias Lear, took up the task of teaching the young Custis mind how to develop.

She Learns Harpsichord.

Mrs. Martha Washington took her small granddaughter through all the grades of the housewife and mistress of a plantation. In addition to these domestic duties Mrs. Washington taught Nelly to play the harpsichord. Neither of them were as cheerful as crickets during practice-hours if we can believe what was written in that day. She used a thimble with which to bring Nelly's mind back to the keys. But Gen. Washington knew another way to inspire the small learner with a love of music. He brought a harpsichord at the cost of a thousand dollars, all the way from London town. Then the lessons marched along gaily under the inspiration of the new instrument.

Meantime, in quaint Fredericksburg, a little boy was growing up, too. He was Lawrence Lewis, son of Washington's favorite sister, Betty and Fielding Lewis. They lived in Kenmore, eleven children in all—five of them died and six lived—and their uncle George Washington was their comrade and chum even as he had been their mother's. Their names were Fielding, George, Lawrence, Elizabeth, Robert and Howell. Someone has said, as a proof of the love these children had for George Washington, that their descendants all claim that his or her ancestor was the favorite nephew or niece of the great man.

Often the big Lewis carriage would bring little Lawrence and his brothers to Mount Vernon to visit "Uncle George." Then there were merry times about the old mansion and grounds. Hide and seek, tag, nut hunting, merry making of all kinds and sorts. From the first Nelly and Lawrence were close friends. They chose each other in the games and Lawrence, no doubt, would admit that Nelly could climb a tree as fast as he could, always the sign of a small boy's capitulation to the charms of the fairer sex.

Goes to Inaugural.

When Nelly was 10 years old, the news came to Mount Vernon that the people had chosen her grandfather as the first President of the United States. Then came the joy of packing and the journey north to New York to see "Grandfather" take the oath of office. I am afraid that Lawrence was forgotten that day as little Nelly saw history in the making before her bright blue eyes.

It was great fun, at first, to ride through the New York streets with grandfather and grandmother, and listen to the cheers of the people as they passed along. At other times she grew sad as she remembered the North garden with the bees humming about the foxgloves and the marigolds; the coral-footed doves cooing under the eaves of the barn and all the wonder sights and sounds of home.

So it was best fun of all when they could go home to Mount Vernon for a time and Lawrence would ride up on his prancing mount to greet them. He was a big boy now in the glory of his teens and he could be impressed by tales of old New York.

Then came Philadelphia when the Capital moved there. Now Nelly was growing into lovely girlhood, and she was permitted to watch the scenes at Mrs. Washington's levees from behind a curtain. She longed to grow up so she could take part in them.

"Center of All Eyes."

Something of the glamor that was Nelly Grant's, Alice Roosevelt and other daughters of Presidents, surrounded Nelly Custis in the last years of her grandfather's regime as President. One writer set down: "She was the center of all eyes, the theme of all praise." Still another said: "She was as witty as she was beautiful." And yet another declared that she was "one of those celestial beings, so rarely produced by nature, sometimes dreamed of by poets and painters. Her sweetness equals her beauty and that is perfect. She has many accomplishments. She plays the piano and sings better than the usual woman of America or even of Europe."

Naturally, the post colonial beaux were not slow to realize her charms. But her heart was in Virginia, by this time, in the safekeeping of Lawrence Lewis, making his way in the Army.

It was in March, 1797, that the happy day came when they could return to Mount Vernon and quiet again. But they were mistaken All America came to that historic place and social duties pressed close in upon the Washingtons. To relieve this, and perhaps with an eye, too, to promoting the match between his favorite nephew and his adopted child, Lieut. Lawrence Lewis, of the Corps of Light Dragoons, was brought to Mount Vernon. Cupid must have laughed, for he knew his day had dawned.

Wedding February 22.

Nelly chose as her wedding day February 22, 1799, the last birthday on earth George Washington was to know. It was a red letter day for Mount Vernon. As his gift Gen. Washington left Nelly in his will lovely Woodlawn in nearby Virginia, now the home of Mrs. Oscar Underwood, widow of the late Senator from Alabama. There the young people built the home that is standing to this very day in all its colonial simplicity and beauty. Their first married years were passed at Mount Vernon and their two oldest children are said to have been born there.

After Gen. Washington's death they could not bear to leave Mrs. Washington. Toward the end of her life Mrs. Washington became interested in their plans to build a home at Woodlawn and often drove out the three miles from Mount Vernon to view the site and discuss the plans which Dr. William Thornton, designer of the National Capitol, had made for them. Woodlawn lived nobly up to the hospitable traditions of Mount Vernon while Lawrence and Nelly Custis lived there. Its doors swung back to the great of every land, who came to pay homage to the ward of Mount Vernon. Among these was Gen. Lafayette, who had "caressed her in her gay moods as a child in the home of his beloved commander." Eight children were born to them but only three lived to maturity.

Buried at Mount Vernon.

Death came suddenly to Lawrence Lewis on November 20, 1839. Once more Nelly Custis went to Mount Vernon to weep at the tomb of her husband there.

Nelly Custis Lewis lived 13 years after Lawrence Lewis' death. But not at Woodlawn. She made herself a new home far from pressing memories of Mount Vernon and Woodlawn at "Audley" in the Shenandoah Valley under the shadow of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Clarke County, Va. On July 15, 1852, she died.

Her funeral took place in the drawing room at Mount Vernon where she had been crowned "as the fairest of the land" with her bridal wreath more than 50 years before. Old friends came from far and near to pay her the last tribute of respect. Not far from the tomb of George and Martha Washington she is buried beneath a simple white shaft with this inscription:

Sacred to the memory of Eleanor Parke Custis Lewis granddaughter of Mrs. Washington and adopted daughter of Gen.
Washington.

Reared under the influence of the "Father of His Country" this lady was not more remarkable for the beauty of her person than for the superiority of her mind.

She lived to be admired and died to be regretted on the 15th of July, 1852, in the 74th year of her age.

The words "Nelly Custis" will keep their place among the certain names in American history that possess eternal charm in the very mention of them. They bring fragrant memories in the people of today and open a vista to past scenes through which the men and women of the present may visualize the gracious and gallant figures on the stage of American youth.

Jacket Suit of Unlined Tweed Useful to Bridge Difficult Winter-to-Spring Wardrobe Gap

Directed by Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 28.—Tired of waiting for the moment when you can get comfortably and smartly into a new spring fashion? It's arrived. For the unlined tweed jacket suit is going to be a spring winner. And because it is unlined . . . and of light weight . . . it fits as nicely under your winter coat as a wool dress. And is just as comfortable.

Some of these suits are made of real imported English and Scotch tweeds. Others are domestic bred. All are soft and light and have a comfortable homespun look to them.

Suits of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

Unlined Jackets.

The body of the jacket has no lining. And that keeps the suit not-too-warm and not-a-bit bulky under the winter coat. Some jackets are lined across the shoulders . . . not only for better shape but to save any chance of a scratchy feeling that sensitive skins are apt to complain of. And some are lined in the sleeves so they pull on easily over a sweater.

There are varied types of jackets. The causual English favorite is built on almost Norfolk lines, as is the one in the illustration, with notched collar, a belt and pockets and yoke.

If this isn't your style, there's a semifitted jacket with two or three button fastening and notched collar. Or—more youthful looking—a jacket which buttons right up to the throat and the little turnover collar. And this type needs no blouse under it.

Skirts Slender but Ample.

The skirts look slender, but you'll find them ample. With gored sections, pleated godets, kick or box pleats at back or front giving walking ease.

The plain color tweeds used in these suits most always have some interesting thing done to their weaves. They'll be herringbone, diagonal or with a nubby texture.

But some have more than one color applied in small patterns, such as diagonals, fine checks or nubbed effects.

For double-season wear . . . now and as a spring suit—the deeper colors are best. A dark hunter's or Tyrolean green, brown, rosy red, rust or medium blue. Checks in black, navy, brown or green with white are refreshing.

But if you wait until later to choose yours you may want a lighter color, such as soft, dusty blue, medium soft green, rose, gold, beige or gray.

Wear these suits with either sweaters or blouses . . . slip-on sweaters for casual wear . . . short-waist blouses of silk, jersey or lightweight wool for a more tailored look.

And What Is "Well-Dressed"? Many Experts Tell Answer

Designer's Chance-Taking Selection of Ten Provokes Varied Comment in Washington; All Agree Inborn Style Sense Vital; Do Mere Man's Ideas Count?

A Hollywood designer foolhardedly announced a few days ago the names of the ten women that he considers the best dressed in the United States. A risky business under any circumstances, this designer helped to tighten the noose around his neck by including a couple of movie queens. If he had confined himself to society women, the tumult and shouting occasioned by his pronouncement would have been a mere excited whisper.

But now heated conversations are being held over the bridge tables in Hackensack and at dinner parties in Spokane as to why the designer chose a certain movie star for his list and left out Miss So-and-so. Invariably these conversations bring up the question, "What constitutes a well-dressed woman?"

Many Schools of Thought.

Well, what does? After interviewing a Washington artist, a stylist, a costume designer, a society woman, and a debutante on this subject, the bewildered reporter discovered there are several schools of thought. One believes a woman should pigeon-hole herself into a certain type and stay there until she dies. If she is a sportswoman, only death can liberate her from tweeds, homespuns, and plain evening gowns. If she is the ethereal type, she is doomed to spend her days in fluttery chiffons and ruffled organdy.

The opposing group believes that a woman has a right to change her personality as often as she does her mind. One day she may part her hair demurely in the center, roll her dewy eyes heavenward, and look like a saint. The next, she may put on false eyelashes, wear long slinky skirt, and out-siren Cleopatra.

Inborn Style Sense.

All of those interviewed believe that most fashion leaders have an inborn style sense, but grant that this intuition can be acquired.

"It takes time, however," said Miss Edith McCartney, distinguished portrait painter. "I've noticed that women who are well-dressed spend hours studying style trends, the things that are most becoming to them, and the clothes that are to be found in the shops. It takes money, too. The smartest clothes are the most simple ones, and simplicity is expensive."

Miss McCartney believes that the majority of women want to be well-dressed, not to please themselves, but to please men.

"A man's taste can usually be depended upon," she said. "He may not know just why he likes a cerdress or hat but if he does approve of them, they are likely to be of fine material and expertly made. Women used to think that men preferred the doll-baby type, and I suppose a great many of them did, but they have now learned to prefer smartness to prettiness. Personally, I think the two can be combined to good effect if the woman studies her type and dresses accordingly."

Individuality and Daring.

Whether women dress to please men provoked almost as much argument as the type question.

"A man's likes and dislikes should never enter the mind of a woman when she goes shopping if she wishes to be well dressed," declares Miss Mary G. Whiteman, stylist for one of Washington's smart shops. "If she is capable of being a style leader, she has enough taste and artistry to guide her in her selection of clothes without having to consider what a man would like. He would usually like the wrong things, anyway. I think women should have individuality and a bit of daring in their wardrobes. They won't have, if they waste time trying to figure out what would appeal to men."

A debutante not only admitted that she chose her clothes with the idea of winning masculine approval and attention, but could not believe that any woman existed who didn't do the same.

Men's Ideas Respected.

"I never buy a thing but what I wonder how the current flame will like it," she declared. "My friends do the same. And so do all women, whether they own up to it or not. If they didn't consider a man's likes, do you suppose they would wear low-cut evening gowns? Of course not. A woman's shoulders are no treat to another woman. It takes a man to appreciate them. And men surely do go for daring evening gowns, as long as their own wives are not wearing them."

Miss Ada Stuart Klein-Peter, head of the Stuart School of Costume Design and Illustration, agreed with her. "The wise woman not only dresses to please men, but relies upon their judgment to a considerable extent," said Miss Klein-Peter.

"A man takes in the whole picture at a glance. He notices the way a woman walks, the way she stands and sits and smokes. He notices whether her nails are manicured, whether her make-up is applied skillfully, and whether her hair is arranged becomingly. He will apply the brakes if she tries to be too individual. Some women, in an attempt to be different, end up by being freakish. Nothing offends a man's taste so much as that. Just as bad as being too individual is being too sheep-like in the matter of style. When purple is in vogue many women who look positively bilious in that color wear it anyhow. They want to be in style. Well, it would be much better if they chose colors that were more becoming and less stylish."

Prettiness vs. Smartness.

Miss Klein-Peter believes that prettiness should be sacrified to smartness. Just the opposite is the better rule according to a young society woman.

"I've found that men would rather see a woman in a becoming hat than one of those supposedly 'smart' affairs that make her look as if she had suddenly descended from another planet. Smart dresses usually manage to be becoming, too, but when they don't, I leave them alone. I select something that looks well on me. And if other women whisper, 'My, but Mary looks frumpish in that gown,' I don't care a rap as long as the men say, 'You're looking lovely tonight, by dear.'"

High Schools To Graduate 644 Pupils

Will Award Diplomas at Exercises Tuesday and Wednesday.

Make Way for 1,325 New Students From Lower Grades.

Washington high schools will bid farewell to 644 white students and welcome 1,325 newcomers this week. Diplomas will be presented to the graduates at exercises tomorrow and Wednesday.

A number of the high school graduates are expected to return to their respective schools for post graduate work. Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou has given assurance they will be accommodated despite the reduction in funds.

Junior high schools will graduate 1,125 students who will enter high school. Two hundred elementary children will be promoted directly to high school.

Central Graduates 200.

Central will graduate 200, McKinley 140, Eastern four-year class 109, three-year class 32, Roosevelt 100, and Western 72.

In the junior highs, Eliot will graduate 80, Gordon 150, Langley 171, Jefferson 61, Macfarland 121, Paul 128, Stuart 130, Deal 80, Hine 130, and Powell 64.

The three-year class of Eastern High and the four-year class of Roosevelt will be graduated Tuesday night. Exercises at Eliot, Hine, and Macfarland Junior High Schools will be held Tuesday afternoon. Langley Junior exercises will be held Tuesday night.

Exercises at Colored Schools.

Exercises will be held Wednesday at Eastern for the four-year class, at McKinley and Western High Schools, and at Deal, Gordon, Jefferson, Paul, Powell, and Stuart Junior Highs.

The following colored schools will have exercises Tuesday: Armstrong, Cardoza, Francis, Garnet-Patterson; and on Wednesday, Dunbar, Randall, Shaw and Terrell.

In addition to the elementary students entering senior high school, a large number will enter junior high schools.

Radio Leaders To Hear Dill

Senator to Discuss Merger of U. S. Agencies on Communications.

Consolidation of communications control agencies of the Government into one body, to be known as the Communications Commission, will be discussed by Senator Clarence C. Dill of the State of Washington tonight at 7 o'clock at a meeting of the American section of the International committee on Radio at the University Club.

His topic will be "Legislation Pending and Prospective Regarding Communications." Senator Dill will discuss the report of a board of experts recommending consolidation of function of the Federal Radio Commission into the new body.

C. B. Jolliffe, chief engineer of the Federal Radio Commission, will speak on the Mexico City radio conference of last July. William R. Valland, chairman of the executive committee, will report on the work of the section during 1933, and will discuss an international radio conference to be held in Warsaw, Poland, in April.

Lynne Lamm, chairman of the nominating committee, will report on elections for the coming year. He will be assisted by Armstrong Perry, Lawrence Whittemore, Louis Caldwell and Henry Adams Bellows.

Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine, president of the American section, will preside at the meeting.

Accidentally Shot, Policeman Rallies

Blood Transfusions Found to Be Unnecessary.

The condition of Policeman Edward H. Hinson, accidentally shot while cleaning his service revolver at the Tenth Precinct station Saturday, was reported "greatly improved" at Garfield Hospital last night.

Hinson was shot in the chest. It was expected at first that blood transfusions would be required, and Capt. Ira Sheetz of the Tenth Precinct and Detective Sergt. Robert S. Barret volunteered, but physicians stated a transfusion was not necessary.

W. A. Anderson, 34, In Automobile Crash

Suffering from shock, William A. Anderson, 34, of 4421 Fessenden street northwest was admitted to Mount Alto Hospital yesterday after the automobile he was driving crashed into a parked car at Wisconsin and Nebraska avenues northwest.

CWA Aid Asked for Taft and Bloomingdale Centers

A field house for the Bloomingdale Recreation Center in McMillan Park, top picture, has been vetoed by the Fine Arts Commission, because it would encroach on the mound area of the fountain, inset, built by citizens of Michigan as a memorial to the McMillan family of that State. Another field house design is being prepared. Funds from the CWA have been alloted for this work. Money from the same source will be sought by the Burroughs Citizens Association to complete the Taft Recreational Center, shown in the lower picture.

Fall on Stairs In Empty Home Fatal to Owner

John Dorrance Sutton, 62, Succumbs Following Skull Fracture.

Injured Saturday, when he plunged down a flight of basement stairs while working in an unoccupied house he owned at 2707 P street northwest, John Dorrance Sutton, 62, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital.

Sutton was found unconscious at the foot of the steps by his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Adams. They said he left his home, 2147 O street northwest, early Saturday morning to do some painting and repair work at the P street house.

When Sutton failed to return at dinner time, Mr. and Mrs. Adams started in search of him. He was alone in the house, police said, and apparently fell down the darkened stairway. He suffered a fractured skull.

Mrs. Adams said her father had suffered recently from dizzy spells. It is believed he was seized with such a spell while on the steps.

7 Marine Reserve Privates Promoted

Recruits to Receive Oath From Colonel Staley.

While the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade at 458 Indiana avenue is extending every effort to have countermanded the District Commissioners' order evicting the brigade by February 1, the activities of the brigade are continuing.

This evening, enlisted men designated for appointments as midshipmen will receive their designations for appointment. The men are Privates John W. Chambers, 2822 Thirty-seventh street northwest; Lidstone C. Russell, 2400 Twentieth street northwest; Lewis Courtland Knight, Alexandria, Va.; Wilson H. Cranford, 73 Rhode Island avenue northeast; Raymond W. Alexander, 1609 East Capitol street; William L. Morrison, 812 Decatur street northwest, and Joseph R. Tucker, 515 Eighth street southwest.

The recruits enlisted during January will be given the oath of obligation by Lieut. Col. J. J. Staley, brigade commander.

Farewell to—

The old Norton rendering plant, which was a landmark with your eyes closed, is being torn down.

A detail of youths from the Civilian Conservation Corps camp at Fort Hunt were put to work last week razing the building, located on a scenic river promontory off the Mount Vernon Memorial highway near Four Mile Run. The land is owned by the Federal Government.

For 20 years or more the plant was journey's end to aged horses and other animals which emerged as foundations for glue and other products. It was abandoned recently in favor of an up-to-date rendering factory on the Washington-Richmond highway at Columbia pike.

Burroughs Citizens Seek Funds to Complete Park Project.

The CWA will be called to the aid of two recreational centers this week—the Taft and the Bloomingdale in McMillan Park.

Members of the Burroughs Citizens Association, undaunted by failure to obtain restoration of the cupola on the new Taft Junior High School, will launch a campaign for CWA funds to complete the recreational center surrounding the school.

On behalf of the Bloomingdale center, Miss Sybil Baker, head of the playground department, will rush plans for a new design for a field house. Funds for the field house already have been allocated by the CWA, but the original design was rejected by the Fine Arts Commission on the grounds that it encroached on the general scheme of development of McMillan Park.

Want Swimming Pool.

One of the main objectives of the Burroughs Citizens Association for the Taft center will be a swimming pool. Relocation of a baseball diamond also will be asked. Other items to be requested include: tree planting, grading and filling up to the school driveway.

Development of these requests will complete the center. Five tennis courts and a baseball diamond are now on the grounds, and ground around the school is being graded and landscaped.

Fight Going to Court.

As for the missing cupola—the fight to have it restored is going to court, according to Raymond L. Gilbert, president of the association. A writ of mandamus will be brought against the District Commissioners, alleging that they failed to perform their duty by ignoring the recommendation of the Fine Arts Commission that the cupola be kept on the building.

Although the former District Commissioners were responsible for this action, the suit will name the present Commissioners as defendants, as the case is a test one to determine the powers of the Fine Arts Commission.

Both the recreation and cupola situations will be discussed at a meeting of the association Thursday night at the Burroughs School. Marshall Finnan, director of National Parks, to whom the CWA requests is being made, will attend.

Study Nature To Know God, Senator's Plea

McCarren Is Speaker at Breakfast of Catholic Retreat League.

Contemplation of nature's open spaces makes man realize that there is a God, Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, yesterday told more than 700 members of the Manresa League of Laymen's Retreats at their annual breakfast in the Mayflower Hotel.

Speaking of the need for a man to get off by himself, Senator McCarran quoted a pagan philosopher, who said, "Within every man's grasp is the power to make for himself a heaven or hell." In the words of St. Paul, he said man should seek to "Know thyself."

The Most Rev. John N. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, presided at the mass and urged upon all a spiritual inventory.

The Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, Bishop of Modra and rector of Catholic University, reminded all that the building of a Nation or an institution depends on the spirit of the individual and moral restraint and character.

Those attending the mass received communion as a spiritual gift to Pope Pius XI. The breakfast was a reunion of all men who had made retreats at Manresa during the last year.

Among the prominent guests were Senator McCarran, Representatives Vincent Carter, of Wyoming, and Michael Reilly, of Wisconsin; United States District Attorney Leo Rover, George E. Herring, State deputy of the Knights of Columbus in the District; William Joseph Neale, president of the Washington Holy Name Society, and John Brennan, president of the Washington League of Laymen's Retreats. Walter D. Beller was general chairman of the breakfast committee.

One Kitchen May Supply School Lunch

Capt. Webster to Confer With Allen on New Set-Up.

Distribution by Army Trucks Believed to Be Made.

A plan of action for the school lunch program will be decided upon today at a conference between District Commissioners, school officials and Dr. Louise Stanley, head of the Bureau of Economics of the Department of Agriculture.

Capt. Louis Webster, quartermaster Corps, U. S. A., who has been assigned to take charge of the lunch program, said last night he is awaiting instructions from Commissioner George E. Allen.

"The War Department is glad to help in every way possible," Capt. Webster said, "but there is no way of telling exactly what will be done until the District officials decide on what they want."

Establishment of a central kitchen for preparation of food and distribution to the various schools in army trucks is expected to be the basis of the plan to be adopted at today's conference. A former Georgetown school is understood to be under consideration for the site of the kitchen.

Milk and fruit will be added to the luncheon menus today. The milk will be supplied by a Fairfax dairy, and the fruit will come from the Federal surplus food supplies.

CWA employes, teachers and mothers will continue to serve the lunches at the schools. Many of the schools are said to be unable to keep the food warm, because of lack of equipment. This will be corrected under the new program to be worked out today, it was learned.

Mrs. B. W. Davis, 81, Of West Virginia, Dies

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Davis, 81, widow of B. W. Davis, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur C. Fisher, Ridgeway, Pa.

Her body will be brought tomorrow to the home of another daughter, Mrs. William J. Lambert, Limestone, near here. The funeral will be held Tuesday at Duling Church, with interment in Queens Point Cemetery.

Charles Oden's Rites At Cumberland Today

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The funeral of Charles Oden, 20, who died Friday night from poisoning, self-administered, according to the authorities, will take place tomorrow from the home of his mother, Mrs. Sadie E. Oden.

Mrs. Rowland Buried Near Berryville, Va.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Funeral rites were conducted today at Brucetown Methodist Church South, near here, for Mrs. Lettie Rowland, 84, of a well-known Clarke County family, who died Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Shirley. Burial was in Brucetown Cemetery.

Hit-and-Run Fatality Holds Mate Freed in Death of Wife

Released under bond last week following an alleged hit-and-run accident, Earle Edward Bishop, 32, exonerated by a grand jury some time ago in the fatal shooting of his wife, was rearrested yesterday after a victim of the auto crash died in Casualty Hospital.

On January 21 Bishop was charged with leaving the scene of an accident and failing to make his identity known immediately. His car struck and overturned the machine of Joseph S. Harris, 36, of Brentwood, Md., at Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast.

Bishop was arrested when he appeared at the Ninth Precinct station to report the accident, and later released under bond. He was rearrested yesterday and held for action of the coroner's jury.

Miss Laura Enger exhibits a number of chocolate drops, filled with various kinds of liquors, which have been confiscated from dealers here. Six of these equal a small cocktail, it is believed, and 12 are a "stiff drink."

Rum, cognac, apricot brandy, whisky and sherry-filled chocolate drops, which, it is believed, are being sold in numerous candy shops, grocery stores and delicatessens throughout the District, are being investigated by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

The candies, most of which are wrapped in glittering tinfoil bearing the brand of flavor in pink and blue printing on the outside, contain 14 per cent alcohol when the centers are analyzed, and 8 per cent when the entire confection is minutely examined.

So far agents here have no specific cases of the rum drops being sold by the piece to children, or even acults, but they believe this is taking place.

Last month two shipments of the alcoholic candy were seized. One of these was consigned to a Washington wholesale confection concern and consisted of nine boxes. Another, consigned to a candy and tobacco company, consisted of 23 boxes. They were discovered as inspectors were performing their routine duties looking over stocks.

Both shipments had come from a dealer in Baltimore, George P. Larrick, chief inspector with the Administration, said yesterday.

The dealer is under investigation. Larrick and his aids seek to prevent the entrance of such merchandise into the District and to stamp out its transportation in interstate commerce. Whether the candies actually are manufactured abroad, or whether they are a domestic product, also is puzzling agents.

Enough to Intoxicate.

J. Walter Sale, in charge of the Water and Beverage Laboratory of the Drug Administration, asserts the confections contained enough alcohol to intoxicate a person particularly sensitive to such stimulation.

In Philadelphia last week, where the drops were found available to children at two cents apiece, six pieces were discovered to contain as much alcohol as a short, stiff cocktail, and 12 to be as potent as a "long, tall drink."

Girl, 21, Shot as Men Fight Over Revolver

A shot fired by her brother as he battled with another man for possession of a revolver early yesterday, sent Mary McNara, colored, 21, to Emergency Hospital with a bullet wound that may prove fatal.

The woman was shot at 31 M street southwest. Police said her brother, James McNara, 21, and John Kirhesy, 26 were fighting.

Dinner Planned at Berwyn.

Dr. Gray Hits Radio, Movies In Pulpit Talk

American "U" Chancellor Deplores World's False Values.

Today's challenge to religion is the restoration of a lost sense of values, said Dr. Joseph M. Gray, new chancellor of American University, guest preacher at the First Congregational Church yesterday morning.

Scoring the "vulgarity of the tabloids," the "triviality" of the radio, and "obscene motion pictures," Dr. Gray asked: "Are these what martyred men have died for?"

"People have condemned the church for trying to interfere with private life and again for interfering with public life," the chancellor said. "In the minds of many people religion has its place in public life when it is on the side of leaders, politicians, editors, &c. Religion cannot be divorced from anything."

Pointing to flaws in modern religion, Dr. Gray continued: "Religion through the ages has called people to live a dangerous life. Modern religion does not. It calls them into the church to join a society there similar to that outside the church."

He quoted a man he described as a cynic: "'Christians are equally shocked at seeing people doubt Christianity as at seeing them practice it.' Religion has been used to evade realities."

Dr. Gray read an editorial by a writer, whom he described as "anything but the ideal of the church," which called religion the only solution to the intricate problems facing society today.

"There would have been no heroism about that ordinary little band that we revere as our Pilgrim Fathers, had it not been for their religion," he said.

Burglars Get $569 Liquor, Miss $1,600

Safe Containing Cash Resists Efforts of Thieves.

Smashing their way through the ceiling of a downtown People's Drug Store, thieves early yesterday looted a liquor vault of seven cases of assorted whiskies, and after pocketing articles from various counters, beat a hasty retreat, leaving behind $1,600 in currency.

A hole 3 feet in width was torn in the ceiling of the store at 1323 F street northwest after the intruders gained entrance to an upper floor occupied by the Waltz Photographic Studios. They took a small amount of change from a desk drawer before smashing their way through the drug store ceiling.

The robbers apparently backed an automobile to a rear door of the store, police said, climbed the fire-escape and forced a window into the studio. Loot was loaded into the waiting car, police believe, and the robbers sped away after an unsuccessful attempt to tear the outer door from a safe.

A chisel and bit and brace were found beside an office safe in the drug store. The combination was torn from the door and a futile attempt had been made to pry off the hinges. Kenneth F. Jackson, assistant manager of the store, said the safe contained $1,600.

Woman's Leg Broken When Struck by Auto

Leo C. Stretberger, of 1805 Naylor road northwest, said by police to be driver of the car, received slight lacerations of the wrist by shattering glass. He was not held.

Sholl's Wins 71st Straight, Defeating Rider College Quintet, 39-25

Capital Five Is Led by Kiesel

Boys Club Is Winner, 58-36, Over Petersburg Tossers.

WITH a furious scoring drive in the last five minutes of play, touched off by a spectacular shot from mid court by Robey, left guard, Sholl's basket ball team carved out another sweet victory yesterday at the Boys' Club of Washington gym by conquering Rider College, 39-to-25, to bring its two-season winning streak to 71 games.

Rider forged ahead after 20 minutes of play with a 16-15 lead in their grasp. During this period Sholl's held the lead only once, that time with the score at 10-8.

Lead Changes Hands.

The lead see-sawed back and forth during the next 15 minutes, and never did more than a point or two separate one team's advantage over the other. With the score deadlocked at 23-all and five minutes to go, Robey pocketed a goal from the center of the floor, and set off the spark for a blazing rally that saw Hal Kiesel, center, the spearhead of the attack. Kiesel rang up 10 points to lead in scoring. Needham and Tramantan scored 6 points, each, for Rider.

In the preliminary battle, the Boys' Club with Beach running wild with 22 points, swamped the Petersburg (Va.) A. & P. team, 58-to-36. The Clubbers dominated play from the start, holding a 31-15 lead at the turn.

Fair Grounds Race To Culloden, $5.20

Sergeant Hill Overhauled in Driving Finish.

New Orleans, Jan. 28 (AP).—Culloden, L. Wilson's 7-year-old campaigner, won the fifth and feature race of the Charity program today at the Fair Grounds over a track made heavy by recent rains.

Culloden won in slow time of 1:53 4-5 for the 1 1-16 miles, coming from behind in a driving finish to overhaul Sergeant Hill and take the race by a nose. Clifton's Queen closed fast to earn show money.

The winner paid $5.20 as the favorite to the $2 mutuel, $3.00 to place and $2.20 to show. Sergeant Hill paid $5.20 and $2.80 and Clifton's Queen paid $2.80 to show.

World Bobsled Title Captured by Germans

Garmisch, Partenkirchen, Germany, Jan. 28 (AP).—The German bob, Olympia, with Hans Kilian driving, today won the world four-man bobsled championships in 5:32.75 for four runs. Kilian's fastest mile was 1:19.31, total time for the first two runs yesterday being 2:39.45. The winners covered the last two runs today in 2:13.30, snow slowing the course.

Rumania was second in 5:32.75, with France and Austria trailing.

Nokesville FFA Five Nips Handley, 27 to 25

Nokesville, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.)—The local chapter of the Future Farmers of America defeated the Handley chapter of Winchester last night, 27 to 25. They were the winners in their respective districts.

Nokesville will enter the series finals to be played at Handley High School Saturday, February 3. Teams from three other districts will compete.

Heurichs Rout Hawaiians, 32 to 17

Experience Little Trouble in Continuing Streak; Fort Myer Wins.

THE undefeated Heurich Reds, local professional basket ball team, added another victim to their rapidly growing string of victories yesterday by flattening the Aloha Stars of Hawaii in the G. W. gym., 32-17.

The invaders, smothered in shirts of matted shreaded wheat and boasting of solid Irish names and a poor defense for the local five, proved no match for the red-clad Heurich courtmen.

Following a rather slow start, with numerous fouls marring play of both teams, the Washingtonians took the lead after the score was tied at 4-all. Featuring in the early steam roller attack were Bennie and Evans, who whipped their team into a 13-5 lead at the half.

Reds Elevate Score.

It was in the second half of the argument, after Miss Lakona stumped about the hardwoods with a realistic Pacific Island hula-hula that the local team turned on the heat and mounted the score to 21-9.

But the Heurichs, after reaching that particular point of the game, delved into some listless playing and the Sandwich Island basketers sank some sterling midfloor goals.

Fort Myer Wins.

In a preliminary tilt the Fort Myer quintet defeated the Fort Washington five, 21-15. Ryan, of the Myer's team, was the individual performer with a quartet of baskets for 8 points.

Cavaliers Add To Boxing Laurels

Win Third Victory in Row by Beating Tarheels; V. P. I. Wins.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 28 (AP). Stopping those classy University of Virginia boxers seems to be the season's toughest assignment in Southern Conference circles.

The Cavaliers made it three in a row last night, mauling out a 6-to-2 triumph over the University of North Carolina Tarheels, to add to triumphs previously scored over Harvard and Virginia Military.

Technical knockouts stopped two of the bouts with Capt. Harold Stuart disposing of Dexter Hornaday, middleweight, in the second round, and Lyndon Lee, light heavy, stopping Marvin Ray in the third round.

Score Decisions.

Meanwhile at Blacksburg, Virginia Tech's mittmen were smashing out a 6-2 triumph over Virginia Military. It was a farewell victory for Coach Dick Esleeck, who leaves for Hampton High School to coach and teach. Capt. Eddie Blain, a lightweight, and Tex Goodwin, a middleweight, won the only Cadet victories.

At Richmond, the University of Richmond Spiders, turned in an equally easy 6-to-2 victory over Roanoke's Maroons, with Dave Scott, Richmond 125-pounder, earning a decision over Jimmy Wright, of Roanoke, in one of the classiest scraps of the evening. Freddie Vaughan, Richmond light heavy, was impressive in his victory over Bob Doyle.

Bruce High Wins, 17-16, On Last-Minute Goal

Westernport, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.), Tally Hanna's free throw in the final minute of play broke a tie score and gave the Bruce High School quintet a 17-to-16 victory over Barton High School in a Western Maryland Interscholastic League contest played here.

Tropical Puerto Rico Seen Poor Training Site for Nats

Territory Offers No Opportunities for Exhibition Games; Griffith, However, Will Give Consideration to Dern's Request.

By Frank H. Young.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN'S request that the Nats consider training in Puerto Rico next spring is so new that President Clark Griffith has had little or no time to give the matter serious consideration. "The fact is," he said yesterday, "I'm pretty well satisfied with the condition my players have been in after spring work in Biloxi. However, I'm going to look into the question of shifting to Puerto Rico next spring, but don't feel that there is any hurry necessary."

The writer, however, has taken it upon himself to do a little investigating for President Griffith and hereby vetoes the proposition for three reasons. The second and third of these reasons are that the boys will look upon the jaunt as a holiday sight-seeing tour and have their attention too distracted from baseball, while Puerto Rico offers no opportunities for competitive exhibition games against teams rated higher than the average American sandlot aggregation.

Question of Climate.

The first reason is the important one and in itself should remove any thought as to President Griffith even considering Secretary Dern's suggestion. It is the question of climate—the ridiculousness of even thinking of taking a group of athletes from the temperate zone to the tropics, where conditions are absolutely different.

When the Nats trained in Florida, Griffith complained that the bearing-down heat made too great a change for the athletes when they came North and opened the regular season. And going to Puerto Rico would be a literal jumping from the frying pan into the fire. The heat there is terrific; so terrific, in fact, that the natives generally enjoy a siesta most of the day and then show a little activity around sundown. This means that the Nats would not be able to practice until evening and it is questionable whether they would be able to do this every day. As to games, the natives can stand only one or two a day.

Figuring on a four or five weeks' stay in Puerto Rico, the Nats would find that most of this period would be needed for them to readjust themselves to the changed climate. Dengue fever or boils could be looked for as their blood thinned out, as nature would have it do. Then, just about the time they were acclimated, they would return to the Capital, or possibly open in Boston, and they would have another month of re-readjustment ahead of them. Meanwhile, the American League pennant race would be going on, but the Nats would not be in it.

Temperature Mounts.

The whole theory of the tropics is that one must rest. While the average year-round temperature of Puerto Rico is estimated at about 80—not bad—that includes many days of around 60 during the cool season. The rest of the time, the thermometer goes so high that it would make a Washington hot day of, say 105, seem like winter.

A certain amount of heat is fine for the athletes, but there is a limit—and Puerto Rico's weather is way past it. Havana is not nearly as hot, yet all of the practice and contests in Jai Lai, the Cuban national game, are held at night because the athletes can not stand working hard in the daytime.

Coming nearer home, the San Francisco Coast Leaguers can not even go as far South as Los Angeles—465 miles—to train because of the climatic change. The Seals always head North.

For national diplomatic reasons, it probably would be a friendly gesture for an American baseball team to train in Puerto Rico, but let's let some team other than the Nats do it.

Grid Game Goes On In Spite of Quake

At this juncture a strong earthquake occurred, without, however, interrupting the game, or the Mexican attack; the game ended with the score, Mexico, 2; Aurora, 1.

Burke, Yankee Coach, Retires for 1934 Season

St. Louis, Jan. 28 (AP).—Time finally has parted baseball's Damon and Pythias, Joe McCarthy and Jimmy Burke.

After more than 30 years in the thick of the baseball wars, Burke, the only native son to manage both St. Louis major league clubs, is going to rest out the 1934 campaign and watch the reaction of his aged legs. If it is favorable, he may be back in 1935.

"The legs are a bit heavy," explains Burke, "I can't get around well. I decided to rest up for a season and see if it would help."

So Burke, a product of St. Louis' "Goose Hill" district, which graduated many noted baseball players to the majors and big minors, recently notified McCarthy, with whom he had been associated for more than 20 years, that he was giving up his coaching job with the New York Yankees.

YESTERDAY'S soccer games drew large crowds of attendant fans on the Monument fields, where British United trounced Senators, 3 to 0; Marlboro just overcame Hispano-Americans, 3 to 2, and New York Avenue and Takoma Park battled to a one-goal draw. At Benning, Brandywine forfeited to German-American.

British United displayed its best form of the season and completely outclassed the Northeast eleven in the opening period. Malloch opened the bombardment with two nice crosses, T. Tatham managing to get rid of both, with some difficulty, and two corners for the British also were cleared. From a free kick, Graham hit the post with a hard drive and Senators remained in British territory for a brief spell, Koennel finally shooting over after forcing a corner kick.

Play Clever Game.

British then settled down and treated the crowd to an exhibition of clever soccer, inspired by the playing of Grosart at center-half. Grosart it was who stopped Senator rallies cold, slipped the sphere to Turner or Malloch or Robertson, or sent hard shots into the Senator goal, and his assistance was made full use of by his forwards, the ball being seldom far away from Burdette. L. Koennel strove valiantly to make headway and from a run engineered by him, the Senators got a free kick 20 yards out, which almost brought disaster to the British, Coleman fumbling the ball, Koennel finally kicking over.

Spiders Beaten In Virginia Feature

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 28 (AP). Virginia basket ball teams—none of them able to carry an unbeaten record throughout January—turned today to a week of intensive battling along the Old Dominion championship trail.

Emory and Henry's impressive Wasps and Washington and Lee's speedy Generals, both defeated by out-of-State rivals, had a clean slate in the Old Dominion, each with a single victory.

Richmond's Spiders, potentially powerful and considered by some experts to be among the State's best quintets, dropped from the ranks of the undefeated last night, being upset by Roanoke's much-mistreated Maroons, who triumphed, 26 to 19. It was the only game of the week between two State contenders.

Sensational Rally.

The Spiders, out in front, 14 to 9, at the intermission, were impotent against a determined Roanoke team that rallied sensationally. Bill Garland, classy Roanoke forward, who has been out of the line-up several weeks wit han injured knee, wa sa big factor in the Maroon victory.

Washington and Lee was idle, but Emory and Henry, although playing no State teams, engaged in a pair of contests with invading quintets, losing, 31 to 17, to the House of David sharpshooters, and whipping Milligan, 34 to 18, last night.

Cavaliers Drop Pair.

It was a tough week for the University of Virginia and Virginia Tech's Gobblers, who between them, dropped four games to Southern Conference foes. The Cavaliers, outpointed, 35 to 31, by North Carolina State in an extra-period game, were overwhelmed, 43 to 20, by Maryland's classy Old Liners. Tech, after being routed by North Carolina, 42 to 21, lost to North Carolina State last night, 45 to 30.

Martinsburg Wins.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Martinsburg High defeated Handley High, of Winchester, Va., here, 28 to 14, in opening the 1934 Cumberland Valley Athletic League season.

Maryland U. Five Tops In Dixie

North Carolina U. Five Drops to Third; State Makes Big Gain.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 28 (AP). The Southern Conference basket ball race looked like a 50-50 proposition today with five of the ten teams battling for the league leadership and the other five working feverishly to get their heads above water.

After a week of sporadic firing on the Southern front, North Carolina's Tarheels, the victims of N. C. State's secondhalf outburst, had slipped from first to third position, with Maryland's Old Liners and South Carolina's Gamecocks leading the parade with perfect scores.

State's slow-starting, but oh-so-hard-to-stop Red Terrors made the best gain of the week, winning three in a row—two of them after spectacular rallies—to climb into a fourth-place tie with Duke's idle Blue Devils.

Twice Comes From Rear.

On two occasions the half-time intermission found State trailing—by 10 points in the Virginia game and by 5 in the Carolina set-to—but the Terrors went on to win by 35 to 31 and 34 to 30 scores. They needed an extra period to whip the Virginia Cavaliers. Virginia Tech, defeated in five consecutive Conference games, was much easier and went down 45 to 30 before the State attack last night.

Maryland's towering veterans, with the Sophomore Bennie Buscher helping considerably, added a fourth victory to their perfect score by giving Virginia's embattled Cavaliers their worst whipping of the season, 43 to 20. Rufus Vincent, Maryland's leading Southern Conference scorer a year ago, tallied 20 points.

Meanwhile, the Tarheels, undismayed by their only defeat of the season, bounced back into the victory column with a 42-to-21 triumph over Virginia Tech.

But two possible stumbling blocks loom just ahead of Carolina's White Phantoms, who face baptisms of fire against Maryland at College Park Tuesday and their ancient and formidable rival, Duke, at Chapel Hill Saturday.

N. C. U. at Virginia Tonight.

The Phantoms start their week of play against Virginia at Charlottesville tomorrow night, then move on to College Park and from there to Annapolis for a test against Navy's quint Wednesday.

It will be a crucial week for Washington and Lee's Generals, who have broken even in a pair of conference games. Reinforced by the addition of Bill Ellis and Jay Henthrone, football ends who were ineligible for first semester play, the Generals will show a revamped line-up against North Carolina State at Raleigh tomorrow night; against Duke at Durham Tuesday and Virginia Tech at Lexington Thursday. They will complete their week of play against West Virginia at Charleston Saturday.

The only other conference game will send Virginia Military into battle against V. P. I.'s Gobblers at Blacksburg Saturday.

Maryland, in addition to its single conference test, has tilts booked with Catholic University at College Park Friday and Navy at Annapolis Saturday.

Other nonconference games will pit V. P. I. against Davidson at Blacksburg Wednesday, Virginia against Davidson at Charlottesville Thursday and North Carolina State against Wake Forest at Raleigh Friday.

The standings of Southern Conference teams follow:

Team—	W.	L.	Pct.	Pts.	Op. Pts.
Maryland	4	0	1.000	143	109
S. Carolina	1	0	1.000	41	15

New Mile Mark Predicted For Cunningham by Coach

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28 (AP). Iron-legged Glenn Cunningham from Kansas' prairies is the lad America's premier track coach nominates as most likely cinderpath luminary to set up new world's mile run records.

In a survey of the middle-distance situation, Lawson Robertson, mentor of the University of Pennsylvania and American Olympic track forces, today pointed to the Midwestern ace as the trackmen whose capabilities are most certain to turn in a 4:06 time for the four-lap run.

At the same time, Robbie looked over the flock of new mile records of the last few years and said it was his belief that the system of pace inaugurated by the Flying Finn, Paavo Nurmi, was responsible for the time inroads made by track constellations of recent seasons.

"Nurmi's mechanical system of running," said Robbie, "in which he kept a steady pace from the start of a race to its finish, proved that records could be broken without the fitful jerks and spurts that seemed to be a part of this country's athletes' running of a mile race.

"Milers used to run a speedy first quarter, slow down a bit for the second, read a newspaper during the third, and then spurt with what they had left the rest of the way. There was no idea of pace. Today, however, the best milers maintain a steady pace all the way and the result of knowing how to distribute it is better times and much more interesting races."

About Cunningham, says Robbie, his chances for doing the mile in 4:06 are the best because of his physical makeup.

"He is mature," points out the veteran coach, "and has the speed and strength necessary to turn in the record. The fact that he can do a half-mile in less than 1:51 against the world's greatest milers is proof that he has all the attributes necessary to chop time off the mark set up by Jack Lovelock at Princeton last year."

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

I SEE by the papers that the New York Jockey Club has requested with the utmost politeness that seven of the better jockeys kindly refrain from applying for licenses to ride on Metropolitan tracks during 1934. Which, in the homely language of this department, means that they will be given the bum's rush if they have the temerity to apply.

The Jockey Club people aim to please, particularly at this time, when a legalized betting bill is pending in the New York Legislature and it behooves the J. C. people to impress the solons with an earnest attempt to clean up racing in New York. The first blow at phenagling thus takes the form of an edict against the riders.

So critical is the racing situation in New York, what with admission fees and honorariums from the privileged bookmakers representing the only income of the tracks, that Joseph Widener has announced on behalf of his Belmont track that there is the prospect of only six days of racing at Belmont next summer instead of the usual sixty.

The Battery Boys.

The activity of Federal narcotic agents among the race tracks in the war against doping has reopened an old field for the phenagling jockeys of the turf. With doping on the way out, or at least curbed to the point where it will become the exception rather than the rule, the demand for "battery boys" will be on the increase.

The battery boys are the lads who are willing to take their chances with lifetime banishment from organized racing to apply the electric buzzers to the longshots and hope they get away with it. The perfection of doping and needling steeds with little interference has rendered the battery boys passe during the past few years, but prosperity for them is sticking a bold foot around the corner as a result of the suppression of doping.

Artful Dodgers.

Long experience in the art has taught the battery boys more ways of secreting an electric buzzer on their person than a Communist has complaints. The presence of patrol judges around the track no longer permits a battery boy to get rid of his instrument during the course of a race and they now carry the buzzers in their whips, their boots, under their jackets and on harmless-looking finger rings.

The most famous of the battery boys had the trick of concealing his little electric urger as a locket suspended from his neck within his shirt. On the way to the post, he would loosen a button on his blouse. When the barrier went up, this lad, in the same motion in which he drew his reins for the start, would grasp his battery and use it to good purpose.

One hears very little of the discovery of the battery tricks by the stewards and judges because the news is suppressed for the good of racing, but the next time you see a long shot get home in a form reversal, watch the stewards and you will find their glasses trained on the horse and boy in case the latter attempts to get rid of a battery.

Daddy of 'Em All.

The daddy of all battery stories is nonfiction, and had its setting at a New Orleans track where the phenaglers turned up with an $80 mutuel on a steed whose racing days were thought to be over. And no chances were taken.

The trainer was ready to send the horse to the glue factory and it was sold cheaply to a jockey who long had been a battery boy, but was now under suspicion. Putting the horse back in training, the jock exercised him every morning and at a certain point around the track gave him a jab with the battery point. The steed responded with new life, until he learned to know the sharp prick of the battery point on his neck.

On the day of the race the jockey rode with no battery. But at the same point where the horse had been accustomed to feel the sharp jab of the electric buzzer, the jockey prodded him cruelly with the sharp point of a horse shoe ring and at the same time made a buzzing sound with his mouth. The effect was the same and the horse bounded into the lead to win at 40 to 1.

Cumberland Golf Pro To Conduct a School

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Joe M. Fungy, new golf professional at the Cumberland Country Club, will conduct six weeks' indoor golf school.

Fungy has mailed cards to members of the club as well as the Fort Cumberland Club golfers, explaining his idea.

Fungy, who has been in Cumberland for three weeks, revealed that plans are being made for an extensive golf program at the club this year.

D.C. Ringman Counts on Speed

Mays and Lowry Meet in Semifinal; Three Other Bouts.

JOE FIRPO, whom Ray Bowen will attempt to convert into a chopping block tonight at Portner's, is built like a chopping block—but a chopping block that hits back. Sometime before the finish of their ten-round setto, the chopping block may lash out with a lethal right or left to turn the tables on the chopper. The terrible suspense of wondering when this will happen will probably attract a large gathering of the fistic-minded to the desecrated Alexandria brewery.

Short, squat and dump, Firpo is of a type usually considered mallard consomme to the fast-moving, smart-boxing Washington welter, except for two drawback in the person of two of the heaviest-hitting mitts ever attached to a fighter of his weight. These same two mighty mitts humbled the once highly regarded Jimmy Reed in as neat a display of bone-breaking punching as one would care to see at Portner's last winter.

Firpo's Victims Legion.

The fighters that Firpo has pounded into the rosin dust are legion—as are the fighters who have boxed his ears all over his head. Some of those who have been humbled by the Pennsgrove puncher are better than Bowen and some worse. Some of those who have outboxed Firpo are better than Bowen and some are worse. In other words, when the squat one climbs through the ropes anything can happen—and usually does.

Bowen wound up an intensive training campaign yesterday in a brisk, but light workout. He is, apparently, in peak form, punching soundly and timing his blows exceptionally well. Much of his training routine for tonight's fight has been dedicated to rope-skipping and shadow boxing which, he believes, has increased his speed afoot to the point where he will have little difficulty dancing around and in-and-out on his heavy-punching, boring-in opponent.

Mays Fights Lowry.

Johnny Mays, undefeated in these parts except for a quick knockout at the hands of Roy Manley in his first start, will attempt to spank the up-and-coming young Bobby Lowry in an eight-round semifinal. Lowry has spent a layoff of several weeks in the gymnasium perfecting his boxing form and Mays may find it exceedingly difficult to put the young upstart back in what he considers his place.

In three four-rounders that support the bill, Joe Green tackles Earl Wise, Pete Buonavari meets Tony Coster and Sailor McKenna boxes Tom Rock.

"Around the Ring's Selections—

Bowen to outbox Firpo, Lowry over Mays, Green to beat Wise, Buonavari over Coster and McKenna over Rock.

Company F Tossers Split Double-Header

Company F, National Guard, tossers of Hyattsville won and lost in a twin bill yesterday afternoon on the armory floor, the regulars trouncing the Maccabees of Washington, 44-to-10, and the reserves dropping a 31-to-9 decision to Mount Rainier Boys' Club.

Maccabees fell far behind the Soldiers in the early minutes and at the half were trailing, 20-30. Company F continued to find the basket consistently in the second half.

Company F. Reserves, held the Mounts fairly well in the first half at the end of which the latter had a 12-to-5 lead. The Soldiers dropped out of the running in the second half as Mount Rainier located the net from all angles. Foster Mathias, guard, with 11 points, and Dobyns, center, with 9 were the leading scorers.

Misses Grace Cantrell, Grace Wilson and Grace Hamrich all live in Avondale, N. C. On November 28, last year, they were all removed to the Rutherfordton, N. C., Hospital, each suffering from an attack of appendicitis. Treatment in all cases was the same: operation for removal of the appendix, and all, likewise, were successful operations.

Each of the patients belongs to the same church, and they all live on the same street—but strange as it seems, none of them knew of the others' illnesses until they were all put in the same room at the hospital.

Army regulations provide that "foot troops crossing bridges march without cadence." The effect of a large column of troops marching in step on a bridge might cause the structure to collapse—in fact soldiers have been known to wreck a bridge simply by walking in step across it.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

I said that some day I was going further into the subject of naming race horses. Under the Jockey Club rules a horse can not be named after a person without his consent. It is an unwritten law that the names shall not be advertisements. However, this rule is broken at times. There is no set number of letters but few names are accepted over 14 letters long. Last year someone tried to name a juvenile "The Moon Came Over the Mountain." I'd like to see that one in the regular half-column entries. Two letter names have been numerous. One horse sports a monicker of "O." Most horses' names are derived from their parents. The times bring a trend of names. Remember the war names? Prohibition brought "Dry Girl" and a number of others. "Depression" was named for the well known crash. I wonder what you are calling me after that horrid week of losers?

BILL.

First race—Fair Joan shows up in a field of maidens after finishing a bang-up fourth to Croon. Gilbert will have charge of the saddle work and I see no reason for a miss. Lady Reigh has a chance to wiggle into the place money. Clonard turned in a fair effort last week and could be dangerous.

Second race—Try Sympathy appears to be the most likely winner in this group and probably will be installed the favorite. The son of Tryster turned in a sizzling race opening day and was beaten in the closing yards by Abner. Good Harvest and Alaric for the other awards.

Third race—Chrysmute is asked to go a mile here and seems to have an edge on this group. Turned in some fair sprints at Tropical and ready, the clockers say. Sturdy Ark and Barkantine for the rest. The last named will be a price tomorrow and with Coucci aboard may be the upsetter.

Fourth race — Taunton drops weight for this and I'm going to try to beat Off Duty. The latter has sparkling trials. However, Taunton is speedy when well placed. Haines will ride. Chief A should take care of the others.

Fifth race—Jen's Son was a fast-moving third the last time out after suffering crowding in the race. Fisher will have the saddle assignment with instructions to find clear sailing. Erebus drops down and is the one to beat. Chance Flight comes back after a fine victory.

Sixth race—Stone Martin, the veteran, and Pat C, a much improved plater, will battle it out for the main award here. Stoney is said to be sharp as tack. Boy Crazy will be piloted by Porter, I understand. He has worked well and could make the finish a surprise one.

Seventh race—Momo gets the Bennings call in the final. This one is at tops now and ready to beat such as Fingal. Bright Beauty and Olamay have outside chances, but may need racing.

Rudolph, Cue King, Plays Here Tonight

Erwin Rudolph, the Clevelander, who is the present world champion pocket billiardist, will show his wares twice tonight in District parlors. At 7:45, he will meet one of the District's outstanding amateurs at Lewis & Krauss', while he will give an encore at 9 at the Arcadia. The present title which Rudolph holds is his second of the past four years, and he is the only player, other than Ralph Greenleaf, who has held it during the last 12 years.

Rudolph holds a record of the fastest game, making 125 points in 32 minutes in championship play, and a run of 100 points in 20 minutes in a league game against Greenleaf several years ago.

Following both of tonight's matches, Rudolph will give exhibitions of trick and fancy shots. No admission will be charged.

Takoma Boys Club Meets.

Takoma Northern Boys Club will meet in the firehouse at Takoma Park tonight at 7 o'clock. Members of the football and basket ball teams are requested to attend.

Rosenbloom's Title at Stake Thursday

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP).—Slapsey Maxey Rosenbloom, Harlem's clown prince of boxing champions, stakes his light-heavyweight title against another youngster at Miami, Fla., on Thursday in the outstanding match on this week's fistic program.

The challenger this time is Joe Knight, an up-and-coming Southerner, who will seek to lift Rosenbloom's crown over the championship distance of 15 rounds. Though beaten frequently in nontitle bouts, Play Boy Maxey generally is at his best when the crown is up for decision and probably will rule a slight favorite over the 25-year-old Knight.

Other headliners this week will be Tony Canzoneri and Mickey Walker. Canzoneri, former lightweight champion, will meet Cleto Locatelli, of Italy, at Madison Square Garden here Friday night in a 12-round match, postponed from last week, when Locatelli was taken ill.

Walker Meets Godwin.

Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, National Boxing Association featherweight titleholder, will appear in a nontitle bout at the Broadway Arena here Wednesday night, facing Frankie (Kid) Covelli, of New York, over the 10-round route. On the same card, Christopher (Bat) Battalino, of Hartford, Conn., one-time ruler of the featherweight roost, meets Joe Barra, New York welterweight, also at 10 rounds.

Monday—At West Palm Beach, Fla., Mickey Walker, Rumson, N. J., vs. Bob Godwin, Adel, Ga., light-heavyweights, 10; at Holyoke, Mass., Tommy Rios, New York, vs. Tony d'Alessandro, Holyoke, middleweights, and Trader Horn, New York, vs. Buck Tracey, Boston light-heavyweights, each 10; at New Orleans, Spider Calmes, Tulsa, vs. Jimmy Perrin, New Orleans, and Bobby Calmes, Tulsa, vs. Patsy Flanagan, New Orleans, all bantamweights, each 10; at Albany, N. Y., Baby Joe Thompson, Syracuse, vs. Tommy Romano, Watervliet, N. Y., lightweights, 8; at Syracuse, N. Y., Steve Halaiko, Auburn, N. Y., vs. Mickey Serrian, Scranton, Pa., and Jackie Davis, Cleveland, vs. Tommy Ross, Toledo, Ohio, all welterweights, each 8.

Tuesday—At Seattle, Leonard (Bulldog) Bennett, Seattle, vs. Eddie Ivory, Vancouver, welterweights, 6; at West Palm Beach, Fla., Leroy Brown, Charleston, S. C., vs. Roy Wallace, Indianapolis, light-heavyweights, 10.

Wednesday—At New York, Broadway Arena, Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, vs. Frankie (Kid) Covelli, New York, featherweights, 10 (nontitle), and Christopher (Bat) Battalino, Hartford, Conn., vs. Joe Barra, New York, welterweights, 10; at Indianapolis, Scotty Scotten, Indianapolis, vs. Santos Delgado, Evansville, Ind., and Paul Lee, Indianapolis, vs. Pegwee Weghorn, Charleston, W. Va., all featherweights, each 10.

Thursday—At Minneapolis, Jackie Sharkey, Minneapolis, vs. Wayne Short, St. Paul, featherweights, 8; at Philadelphia, Harry Serody, Philadelphia, vs. Jackie Willis, Philadelphia, lightweights, 8; at Miami, Maxey Rosenbloom, N. Y., vs. Joe Knight, Cairo, Ga., light-heavyweights, 15 (title).

Friday—At New York, Madison Square Garden, Tony Canzoneri, New York, vs. Cleto Locatelli, Italy, lightweights, 12; at Philadelphia, George Courtney, Oklahoma, vs. Billy Ketchell, Millville, N. J., middleweights, 10; at Baltimore, Frankie Petrolle, Schenectady, N. Y., vs. Buster Brown, Baltimore, lightweights, 10; at Boston, Al McCoy, Waterville, Me., vs. Red Affinito, New York, welterweights, 10; at San Diego, Swede Berglund, Ocean Beach, vs. Al Schaaf, Boston, middleweights, 10; at Pittsburgh, Teddy Yoroz, Monoca, Pa., vs. Jimmy Smith, Philadelphia, middleweights, 15.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—If you can picture David and Goliath battling with basket balls instead of slingshots, you have some idea of the legend's modernization this year by the Charles Town High School girls' basket ball team.

The squad boasts the distinction of having the tallest center and the two shortest forwards in the panhandle section of West Virginia in the Misses Betty Linson, Dorothy Bailey and Helen Lugar. Miss Linson is 6 feet 3 inches tall, while her teammates fall just short of being 5 feet high.

The basic difference between the ancient and modern version is that the gladiators are members of the so-called gentler sex and are fighting on the same side of the line.

Miss Linson, who holds the pivot position, is one of the most brilliant students attending the institution, according to D. P. Hurley, principal and basket ball coach. She is a senior and is preparing to enter college.

Misses Bailey and Lugar likewise have good scholastic records. Miss Bailey is in her third year and is taking a similar course, as is her fellow forward.

Alegany High Takes Cage Double-Header

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Allegany High School, of Cumberland, took both ends of a double-header from Keyser High School, the boys winning, 35 to 15, and the girls, 37 to 24.

Keyser's boys were unable to cope with the much taller crew of ball hawks from Cumberland, who registered their seventh consecutive victory of the current campaign. The visitors scored 14 field goals and led throughout the game.

The Great Garden Mystery

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (Spl.).—There is a curious situation in New York town, which will bear some investigating and some writing about. It may very soon blow the lid off a number of things and, if and when it does, it will make interesting reading for a time, which same I have always maintained is good for circulation.

There stands on the city block on Eighth avenue, between Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets, the most costly and elaborate temple to the manly art of self-defense ever erected. It is known as Madison Square Garden, and takes its name from the romantic, musty old arena that once stood just off Madison Square, topped by the golden figure of Diana and which was the place where Tex Rickard first promoted fights in New York. The new Garden is a couple of miles from Madison Square and one block from Broadway and the heart of the theatrical district, the only arena in the world so close to the white light center. It is the most scientifically constructed arena and indoor sports palace in the world.

It will seat comfortably, with a full view of the arena, roughly, 19,000 people, and hold 21,000 with standees. It is built of steel and concrete and is completely fireproof. It has one of the finest ventilating systems in the world, cooling, heating and ice-making plants. For boxing, houses can be scaled to draw from a $40,000 capacity with a $3 top, as the Golden Gloves Amateur tourney does, to $200,000, which I believe was the record gate drawn by Jimmy Maloney and Jack Delaney.

At a $5 top, the house can do between $60,000 and $70,000. The sports theater is completely modern, its lighting system the best in the world. The only other place I know of in which to see a prize fight as well and comfortably is the Chicago Stadium, which is constructed practically along the same lines with possibly one or two improvements, in having been built later.

This arena was once the scene of some of the most thrilling and exciting ring warfare in the history of the boxing game. Here Sid Terris, Paul Berlenbach, Al Singer, Jack Sharkey, Mike McTigue, Mickey Walker, Johnny Risko, Max Schmeling—all the great drawing cards of a decade or so—fought when they were at their best before crowds that rammed the building to the exit lights. Today the sporadic boxing cards draw 3,000 and 4,000, sometime 7,000, and once in a great while 10,000 people. The good drawing cards, the best fighters, no longer appear there. Boxing is at its very lowest ebb in the sports amusement center of the world.

The boxing end of the game is in the hands of a shrewd, intelligent little fellow, a veteran of more than 30 years in boxing, a chap who is intrinsically honest, and whose chief fault is want of tact and a shrewish tongue. In spite of what has been written about "kick-backs" and matchmakers, I am convinced that there is too much at stake in Jimmy Johnston's position for him to bother with petit larceny.

If he has used his position to fatten the family bankroll, it has been only through the use of "family" boxers on the card, fighters managed by his brother. Some of them have been good, others awful. About this same percentage holds for the nonfamily fighters.

Now, that is a pretty good set-up for a fight club I have given you. Why, then, do the fight managers stay out of it? Why are Ross and Petrolle and McLarnin and Baer and Schmeling and Carnera all either out of it or trying to get out of it? A fight manager might dislike Jimmy Johnston for a great many reasons, but not $30,000 worth—the difference between a sell-out in the Garden and a sell-out anywhere else. He wants that dough. Nor is there honor enough in a manager to keep him from squealing if he had to kick back. If he had to kick back enough, he'd run and tell Kilpatrick. The Garden pays promptly, and pays well. What, then, is causing this growing boycott of New York's great fight arena?

Kilpatrick knows a part of the answer and won't break it. I know what lies behind the whispering campaign and am honor bound not to tell. Eventually, it will spill. In the meantime, maybe the fight managers can be persuaded to explain their reluctance to put their boys into an arena that will make some money for them.

Alabama Seeks Second Honor In Circuit

ATLANTA, Jan. 28 (AP).—It becomes more and more apparent every week that Alabama, its thirst for glory not slaked by winning the football title last fall, also covets the Southeastern Conference Basket Ball championship.

The Crimsons are pacing the loop today, as they have done for the past two weeks, with seven victories and no defeats.

Past results, however, have shown that the team that leads the race during the regular season more often than not suffers an early defeat in the Conference tournament, where the championship is decided. The 1934 tournament is a month off and Crisp is veteran enough to know that although these victories look nice now they quickly are forgotten when another team wins the tournament title.

Kentucky, last year's champion, ranks with Alabama as the only unbeaten teams. Kentucky won its fifth triumph last night from Tennessee, 53 to 26.

Based entirely on results of the six-day period, honors go to Vanderbilt, which won all its three games. The Commodores pulled up close enough, with six victories and one defeat for the season, to be ready to challenge for the leadership should either Alabama or Kentucky falter.

The standing of the teams:

Team.	W.	L.	Pts.	Op. Pts.
Alabama	7	0	302	177
Kentucky	5	0	226	116
Vanderbilt	6	1	232	171
Louisiana State	5	1	273	223

Stocks' Prices Level Off as In Closing Sale

Brilliant Treasury Financing Holds Spotlight During Week's Trading.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The brilliant success of the Treasury's financing of the first $1,000,000,000 of the $6,000,000,000 of new money which it proposes to raise in the first half of 1934, overshadowed all other developments of the past week in finance.

The stock markets, after the substantial advances of the previous week, levelled off and trading slackened.

Traders evidently felt that the markets needed a rest while time out was called to appraise the business outlook, in the light of new developments in Washington.

Flow of Foreign Money.

The flow of funds from abroad continued, and despite active selling of dollars by the Federal Reserve, acting for the Treasury, the dollar was inclined to rise moderately. But acceptance of the administration's gold bill, setting up the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, appeared assured toward the end of the week.

Business and financial sentiment remained preponderantly optimistic as to the outlook for the next several months, for it was reasoned that the projected record-breaking peacetime Government expenditures would keep business revival in motion.

Corporate news was largely favorable. General Motors, which earned nothing on its common stock in 1932, reported 1933 net of $1.72 a share. Bethlehem Steel reported a small balance on the black side of the ledger for the fourth quarter of last year, the first quarterly net income in more than two years.

Help for Steel.

Its steel production was smaller than in the previous quarter, but it was evidently helped by its naval business. Pennsylvania Railroad ordered a 50-cent dividend, as it did a year ago, and Norfolk & Western ordered a $2 extra.

Business statistics of the week were somewhat mixed. Retail and wholesale trade reviews were again very cheerful, and freight carloadings showed a small increase, although the normal seasonal tendency would have been downward. Electric power production, however, showed a contraseasonal decline, and steel ingot output slipped back a little. These factors tended to bring down most of the seasonally adjusted weekly index figures on business activity.

The more cautious attitude in the markets evidently indicated a disinclination to speculate on business prospects too far in the future. So far as securities are concerned, some market analysts pointed out that scores of leading common stocks are now selling far above the old yardstick of ten times annual earnings.

Meat Consumption Per Capita Gains

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 28 (AP).—The per capita consumption of meat in the United States during 1933 amounted to about 143 pounds, John H. Moninger, of the Institute of American Meat Packers, Chicago, today told a regional meeting of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The grand total was about 18,000,000,000 pounds, or more than 1,000,000,000 pounds greater than in 1932, he said.

"Although consumption showed a large increase over the preceding year, production of live stock and meats was relatively greater than the purchasing power of consumers," he said. "As a result, the prices of both meat and live stock reached lew levels."

Pork, he said, led the list, reaching a new high level in production that according to the best figures available, was the greatest amount of one kind of meat ever produced in this country.

Copper Prices Reaction Laid To Code Dispute

Zinc Declines $1 Per Ton; Lead Market Is Quiet.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Difficulties in reaching an agreement on the copper code with NRA officials were followed by reactions of ⅛ to ¼ cent in electrolytic copper quotations this past week to the basis of 8¼ cents.

With further conferences called in an attempt to reach solutions to such problems as the disposal of surplus stocks, said to be equal to two years' supply, consumers generally adopted a waiting attitude and quiet conditions have prevailed in the market.

A decline of $1 per ton in zinc at the opening of the week reflected disappointment over failure of mines to curtail despite the current relatively low ore price.

Output Cut Scheduled.

However, reduced output is scheduled for February 1. Consumers who had purchased more actively in the preceding week withdrew from the market and there was little feature to the light trading.

The lead market was also quieter but prices were unchanged. Recent active purchasing was said to have satisfied immediate requirements in some instances, but sellers hoped that a renewed demand would materialize when automobile production expands.

Anticipated seasonal improvement from paint manufacturers and indications of interest from cable makers caused smelters to take a cheerful view.

Lowest Levels Touched.

Tin sagged to the lowest levels since November in sympathy with easier sterling. Although a little consumer buying developed at the decline, demand was generally restricted, owing to continued small tin plate mill operations. Prospects for orders from automobile manufacturers lent some encouragement, however.

The decline in steel production schedules last week reflected continued absence of support from the heavy consuming branches, automobiles, railroads and construction. Orders were largely miscellaneous, with mills showing less inclination to produce for stocks. Finished prices were unchanged, athough the possibility of an advance in sheet quotations was reported. Pig iron remained quiet and unchanged.

Thousands See Post's Dwelling

Model Home in Virginia Delights Growing Crowds of Visitors.

A visit to The Washington Post model home is proving a delightful event to constantly increasing numbers of persons. Each day sees more and more pleased with an inspection of this handsome dwelling, the first to be sponsored in Virginia by The Washington Post. More than 6,000 persons have seen it during the two weeks it has been on display.

The Post's new exhibit house is in Colonial Park, adjacent to Alexandria. The beautiful residence was constructed by R. L. Kane Co., Inc., and is owned by Charles Henry Smith. Kenton D. Hamaker, of Clarendon, Va., was its architect. The home is furnished by Hutchison's, Inc., and the draperies and curtains are by J. F. Ligon. It will be open for inspection Sunday and daily from 11 a. m. until 9 p. m. until further notice.

To visit the home, drive over Long Bridge, then turn right on the upper road to Alexandria and on to Colonial Park, entrance of which is marked by two brick columns of colonial design. Turn into the entrance and proceed to the summit of the hill.

Standard Oil Dealers Given Sales Instruction

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—One hundred and fifty Standard Oil Co. retail dealers from Fredericksburg and Stafford, King George, Spotsylvania and Caroline Counties were instructed in sales methods as followed at the company's model stations at a meeting in the Stratford Hotel here last night.

The meeting was one of a series to be held under the direction of W. B. Ray, sales manager, and L. E. Schutter, marketing assistant, both of Richmond.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Report of the Committee on Security Exchanges Reflects a Fair-Minded Attempt to Eliminate Evils Without at Same Time Hamstringing Markets.

By Ralph West Robey.

Comparatively few people outside of those in the security business probably will take the time to read in its entirety the report of President Roosevelt's committee on the regulation of stock exchanges. I can not help but feel that this is unfortunate.

The report, while containing little or nothing that is new, is from beginning to end an obvious attempt to treat a deep-rooted social problem with complete fairness. At no point is there any evidence that the committee is striving to have an extension of Government control and regulation merely for its own sake.

Neither is there any evidence of antagonism to security trading as such nor a reflection of the belief, so frequently heard in the last four years, that the stock exchange merely is a gambling den and an organization perfectly devised to scuttle and sabotage broad recovery programs of the Administration.

On the other side there is an equally complete absence of any attempt to whitewash the stock exchange and excuse the many abuses of the last few years. These are thrown on the screen without emotion as established facts, but with an unquestioned determination that they must be stopped.

In some instances it is clear that the committee is of the opinion that the solution is easy, and positive recommendations are made. In other cases the issues are not so clear, and only tentative suggestions are made. In still others the committee frankly says that it does not have enough data to enable it to formulate an opinion.

Because of these reservations the report can be considered only as a first step in the direction of making the security exchanges more useful to society. In appraising the report, accordingly, it should be considered as a line of approach, rather than as a definitive program.

Excessive Speculation Viewed as Main Evil.

The underlying thesis of this approach is that "the principal evil connected with stock exchange operations is undoubtedly * * * excessive speculation; that is to say, speculation beyond the point where it promotes and facilitates trade, but where, on the contrary, it "stimulates and exaggerates the normal swing of economic tendencies."

No one, I believe, will doubt the general accuracy of this statement, especially as applied to the history of the last few years. The problem, then, is, first, to determine what leads to such excessive speculation, and, second, to devise a means for preventing its continuation.

In broad terms, the committee finds some nine practices contributing to excessive speculation in one way or another.

These are: (1) Pools, (2) wash sales and matched orders, (3) margin trading, (4) specialists trading for their own account, (5) short selling, (6) inadequate corporate reports, (7) unsatisfactory control over publicity and the selling methods of customers' men (8) connection between brokerage houses and other forms of business, and (9) insufficient reports to the exchange of the financial condition and operation of brokerage houses.

To bring these practices under the proper degree of control, without at the same time wrecking organized security exchanges more or less completely, is the difficult problem. In every instance there is a matter of finely balanced judgment. Some pools and some short selling, for example, are entirely legitimate and not only do not lead to excessive speculation but are of genuine benefit to society as a whole.

Corrective Measures Must Be Taken at Once.

Further, if the best results are to be obtained, it is essential that any necessary action be taken quickly and any resulting penalties be final. In other words, the time to strike at a pool is while it is in operation, not months later after the public has had the stock unloaded on it at a fantastic price.

The committee clearly recognizes this fact. In its opinion "the nonlegal, quick-acting, nonreviewable disciplinary measures which an exchange can take can never be adequately replaced by the slower moving processes of an administrative agency or the courts and the objective should be to preserve and utilize these private mechanisims to the fullest degree possible."

At the same time the committee also realizes that in the past some of the exchanges have not been careful and thorough enough in such supervision. It is essential, in its opinion, therefore, that a relapse into these easy-going ways be prevented.

This it proposes to do by requiring each exchange to obtain a Federal license and thereby place itself under the constant watchfulness of a special supervisory board of the Government.

Such a solution obviously involves a considerable element of compromise. It is an attempt to keep the stock exchanges just as free as possible while at the same time preventing them from subjecting our economy to violent and needless stresses and strains.

In attempting to cut between the extremes in this manner it may be that the committee is too idealistic. It seems to me, nevertheless, that we at least should try such a method in preference either to permitting a continuation of such practices as characterized the late twenties, or to hamstringing the exchanges by detailed statutory regulation.

Officers elected are Eugene Mathews, president; L. C. McGuire, vice president; Jed Wilson, secretary-treasurer, and M. J. Putnam, attorney.

Shenandoah Ships Fine Cattle North

111 Steers Sent Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). One of the fanciest lots of heavy cattle ever routed from Weyers Cave Station, Shenandoah Valley's principal live stock center, was shipped to Northern markets this week. Five carloads of 1,400-pound steers were consigned to Philadelphia and Baltimore.

J. G. Fulton, jr., president of the Rockingham-Augusta Bank, had the largest consignment, shipping 70 of the 111 steers. G. K. Foster shipped 25 and T. J. Wood, 11.

This shipment was unique for the absence of cull, or low-grade cattle.

Greek Minister Guest At Hellenic Benefit Ball

The local chapters of the American Hellenic Educational Association will hold their eleventh annual benefit ball tonight at the Mayflower Hotel. Charalambos Simopoulos, Minister of Greece to the United States, accompanied by his wife, will be the guest of honor. Senator William H. King also will attend.

Reaction Hits Cotton Prices; Demand Less

New York, Dec. 28 (AP).—Reactionary impulses which developed in cotton following the midmonth advance to 11.65 for May contracts, remained in evidence during the past week.

The steadier ruling of the dollar and the falling off in trade demand combined with more or less uncertainty over coming acreage prospects, evidently promoted further realizing or liquidation.

The decline extended to 11.11 for May contracts, or approximately 54 points from the recent high price, but offerings then tapered off somewhat and there was some covering on renewed talk of possible legislation to strengthen the administration's control of production.

May Sells Up to 10.31.

Prices rallied several points during today's trading, with May selling up to 10.31, but eased again, closing tonight at 11.15, compared with 11.45 at the close of the previous week.

A slowing down of business toward the end of the week was regarded as indicating an improved technical position coupled with a disposition to await further developments, particularly with reference to the acreage curtailment campaign or the proposed legislation to limit the amount of cotton ginned next season to 9,000,000 bales.

Report on Ginning.

The report of the Census Bureau showing 12,558,762 bales ginned prior to January 16 was considered about in lines with crop indications of around 12,777,000 running bales.

The report and official figures published with reference to cotton option contracts up to January 22 were without apparent effect on the market. This report indicated that 1,712,442 bales had been placed in the cotton producers pool and 298,900 bales sold, with 417,662 bales still outstanding which holders have until January 31 to place in the pool or until May 1, 1935, for ordering the sale of the cotton.

Reichbank to Join Debt Conference

Berlin, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Reichbank tomorrow for the first time officially will enter conversations between Germany and representatives of foreign creditors affected by the moratorium on interest payments.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichbank, who has vigorously refused to approve increasing the 30 per cent payment quota, even in the face of foreign office pressure, will participate in the meetings.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, January 16, 1934. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No 307, approved December 15, 1932, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia propose to conduct a hearing on the advisability of closing Maine Avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N. "Cap" Stubbs Not Exactly Pleased By Edwina

Walt Mason, Himself

A Hundred Years.

The well-earned fame that now so great appears—what will it look like in a hundred years? We see the great ones play their lordly game, and think them fixtures in the hall of fame; they are immortals, born to rise and shine, while language lasts they won't take in their sign. I ask myself, while driving home my cow, where will they be a hundred years from now? Tom Campbell shone a century ago; his ringing verse all people seemed to know; his rhymes were mumbled by the shepherd lone, and by the monarch on his gilded throne, by ladies fair, while they applied the paint to damask cheeks in boudoirs somewhat quaint, by mariners upon the briny deep, and by the nurse to lull her charge to sleep. And people said "Tom Campbell's fame's secure, till time is done it's certain to endure." Still people quote Tom Campbell's pleasant dope, and think it comes from Shakespeare or from Pope; who hasn't said, a thousand times or two, "'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view?" Who hasn't cried when feeling fairly well, that "'Freedom shrieked when Kosciusco fell?" Who hasn't sprung a hundred times or more, "The wolf's long howl from Oonalaka's shore?" But if you ask us who Tom Campbell was, we get him mixed, perhaps, with Santa Claus.

INSPECTOR KEENE, WITH SERGT. CASSIDY LOOKING ON, NOW EXPLAINED THE INSTRUMENTS WHICH STOOD ON THE TABLE BEFORE JOE CORONA —
IT IS WHAT IS KNOWN AS A "LIE DETECTOR"! IT'S NOT INFALLIBLE, BUT WORKS CORRECTLY ENOUGH TO GIVE US AN IDEA AS TO WHERE WE STAND!!
I'LL ANSWER ANYTHING I CAN, INSPECTOR!!
FINE! THEN DO YOU KNOW WHERE MAXIE GREENBACK IS HIDING?!!
NO, I DON'T, INSPECTOR, AND THAT'S A FACT!! I ONLY WISH I DID, BECAUSE I'VE GOT A LOT OF THINGS TO TELL HIM ABOUT THE CLUB!
LIE DETECTOR MAT
ACCORDING TO THE MACHINE, YOU'RE LYING, CORONA, AND WITH A SELF-COMPOSED BIRD LIKE YOURSELF, IT USUALLY WORKS OUT CORRECTLY!!
YOU SAID IT, CHIEF!
I'M SATISFIED NOW THAT YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR "BIG SHOT" IS HIDING, BUT INSTEAD OF GIVING YOU THE "THIRD DEGREE", I'M GOING TO TURN YOU LOOSE IN A FEW MINUTES!!
AFTER AN OFFICER HAD TAKEN CORONA INTO CUSTODY, KEENE GAVE MIKE CASSIDY HIS ORDERS
PUT TWO OF THE BOYS ON HIS TRAIL AND WHAT'S MORE, I WANT HIM TO KNOW HE'S BEING SHADOWED! I'VE GOT MY OWN REASONS!!
